Four-Way Peace Talks Resume 'Within Days'

HERE IS HOW the "new B.C." would look if Premier Bennett is successful in his bid to annex all of the Yukon and the western part of the Northwest Territories. He said Tuesday he will apply at next month's constitutional conference in Ottawa for the boundary extension.

Drop Charges: SFU Head

BURNABY (CP) — Dr. Kenneth Strand, acting president of Simon Fraser University, announced today he will ask the attorney-general to "give every consideration" for the withdrawal of criminal charges against 114 students arrested in a sit-in Saturday.

Dr. Strand said he had received a letter overnight from Rob Walsh, president of the SFU Student Society, outlining 10 reasons why the charges should be dropped.

He had asked for reasons why the charges should be dropped in a reply to a series of student demands Tuesday night.

The student demands and Dr. Strand's replies followed the arrest of the 114 and charges of obstruction of property being laid against them after police cleared them from the campus administration building which they had occupied since Wednesday.

Mr. Walsh said 2,300 SFU students had signed a petition requesting Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to drop all criminal charges and that, since the purpose of the RCMP was only to clear the building, prosecution was unnecessary.

He said occupants of the building were unaware of the consequences of having a criminal record and could not be considered "fully conscious of committing a criminal act."

"The conviction of the students arrested will in future endanger the possibility of rational debate to resolve the university's problems," he warned.

Mr. Walsh said Dr. Strand's action in appealing to the attorney-general "sort of changes the complexion of things" but he said students were going ahead with a special rally today. They had earlier threatened a general strike.

Dr. Strand Tuesday night rejected a call for a special senate meeting on admission procedures, but said he will set up a student-faculty committee to decide whether registrar's files should be opened.

ENDED OCCUPATION

The pre-dawn arrest of the occupiers ended the occupation which started Wednesday night after the senate rejected student demands for sweeping changes in admission and accreditation policies.

Students Tuesday decided to vote today on whether to strike Thursday. There was no indica-

'We Shouldn't Be Sheepish On NATO Ties'

(See also Page 15)

Defence Minister Cadieux said Tuesday that Canada should not be "sheepish or bashful" about its commitment to NATO.

Describing himself as a "firm believer in collective security," the minister talked to reporters on his arrival at Victoria airport.

"I really believe we are doing something really worthwhile" with the 5,000 soldiers and six air squadrons in West Germany, he said.

He added that the "sizable" naval force Canada has in the Atlantic is "also contributing to the stability of the world.

"And I think this is an important contribution."

ADVISORY BOARD MEETS

Mr. Cadieux is here until Thursday, attending the 11th meeting of the Canadian Military College advisory board at Royal Roads.

The board, composed of senior government and military officials and civilian advisors from all provinces, advises the minister on the operation of Canada's three military colleges.

He said he is not aware of any cabinet split over Canada's NATO policy.

A cabinet committee now is examing this country's NATO role and no decision on future plans would be made until the report is made.

He said the NATO allies were

Kierans Favors Pull-Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans, making it clear he will abide by cabinet decisions, told an interviewer Tuesday night he personally favors a Canadian withdrawal from NORAD.

A guest on the CBC network program Twenty Million Questions, he was asked about statements he had made in the past about Canada leaving the North American Air Defence agreement it has with the United States.

Mr. Kierans said "this hasn't come up in cabinet—thank the Lord. . . ."

Then to an interviewer's question about whether he still feels the same way about NORAD, the minister replied:

"I still feel the same way. I don't think we have any contribution to make in this field.

"I think at the bottom of many of France's difficulties at the moment is that it has just expended too high a percentage of its gross national product on areas and set aside or let go needs in areas of education or in welfare . . . that people want and are crying for."

This appeared to be a reference to France's nuclear military program.

CONG ISLAND BLOCKADED

SAIGON (UPI) — An Allied task force landed by an armada of more than 50 vessels blockaded a Communist island stronghold deep in the Mekong Delta today in what military spokesmen said was the biggest such operation of the war.

Military spokesmen said more than 1,000 South Vietnamese infantrymen were moved ashore from the Allied vessels that set up the blockade around a 20-mile string of islands in the Bassic River, 75 miles southwest of Saigon. The river is one of the key supply routes for Communist forces operating around Saigon.

South Viet Nam Ends Boycott

Times News Services

SAIGON—President Nguyen Van Thieu said today a South Vietnamese delegation will go to the Paris talks within the next 10 days but he cautioned his country not to expect peace to come soon. The enemy will fight while he talks, Thieu declared.

He said he will announce the makeup of the delegation in the next few days.

Thieu said that Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky will go to Paris as over-all co-ordinator of the Saigon delegation, although he will not actually sit in on the negotiating sessions.

Thieu said that Ky "is the man I rely on to lead the delegation to Paris, but he is not the chief of the delegation."

"His role will be to co-ordinate and advise the delegation itself."

DOESN'T SEE PEACE

Thieu, appearing on television and nationwide radio 12 hours after his government announced it had lifted its 25-day boycott of the Paris talks, declared: "Talks with the Communists do not mean peace will be restored soon. They will fight while they are talking and talk while they are fighting."

Thieu said South Vietnam, however, will show to its allies and the enemy "that we have plenty of goodwill."

He asserted that whether "aggression" ends "depends on Hanoi and their tool"—an obvious reference to the rebel National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

Thieu's regime announced Tuesday night it had agreed to end its boycott of the Paris talks in return for the right to head the bargaining on South Vietnamese internal matters.

In Paris, a National Liberation Front spokesman said the NLF would insist on going into the four-way talks "as an independent party on the same footing" as the United States, North Vietnam and the South Vietnamese.

Spokesman Duong Dinh Thao rejected the U.S.-South Vietnamese statement that Washington and Saigon regarded the Paris talks as a two-sided meeting in which the NLF would be part of the North Vietnamese team.

The NLF claims it is the true representative of the people of South Vietnam.

Although Thieu said the talks would get under way "in the next few days" U.S. officials in Washington expect the serious conferences will not get going until late in December.

Thieu complained that since the Nov. 1 halt in bombing of North Vietnam by the United States "there have been more violations by shellings in towns and the killing of innocent children and women."

Both Saigon and Washington announced simultaneously Tuesday night the end of South Vietnam's boycott of the expanded talks.

Bennett Plan Draws Smirks From North

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Commissioner Stuart Hodgson said Tuesday that each time Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia announces a plan to take over part of the north, residents take him with a grain of salt.

Mr. Hodgson said the B.C. premier wanted the Yukon in 1964 and "no one took it seriously." Another approach including part of the N.W.T., was made in 1967 and was similar to one made Tuesday. The reaction was the same.

"Most provinces need to develop their own north before ever thinking of expanding north of 60 (the 60th parallel)."

The territorial commissioner said he was speaking as a N.W.T. resident and any official statement would have to come from Prime Minister Trudeau. That included whether the proposal would be discussed at a federal-provincial constitutional conference as requested by Mr. Bennett.

HODGSON
. . . same reaction

Mr. Hodgson said most residents agree with N.W.T. Councillor J. Gordon Gibson, who said in 1967 that, rather than B.C. take over the N.W.T., it was more likely the N.W.T. one day would take over B.C.

'NOT HOT AIR'

A prominent Yellowknife resident, who declined to be identified, said:

"The north is noted for its cold air, not hot air."

In Whitehorse, Yukon Territorial Commissioner James Smith and Mayor Bert Wybrew laughed at the premier's annexation plan.

"Premier Bennett is a very able and astute politician but we need him like we need another hole in the head," said Commissioner Smith.

"This is not a new offer and it is still pretty one-sided."

Mayor Wybrew said if the proposal was ever put to the people of the Yukon the premier would be "overwhelmed with negative reaction."

"There is no doubt Premier Bennett could do with some of our resources but we are not likely to part with them. All phases of our economy are booming and everyone wants to get on the bandwagon.

"Let Bennett solve his problems his way but without bringing us into it."

'LOTS TO DO HERE'

Premier Bennett has plenty to accomplish in B.C. before he casts longing eyes at the Yukon and Northwest Territories, Opposition Leader Strachan said Tuesday.

"The NDP feels now, as we did in 1964, when the premier first made this proposal to the Yukon and Northwest Territories, that there are a great many unfilled needs to be eliminated in B.C. before this province takes on additional responsibilities," he said.

"I understand the people of these northern territories are thinking of forming their own province. We must respect their wishes.

Uvic Rally Called To Protest Arrests

Posters announcing a mass meeting of students early this afternoon appeared on University of Victoria campus this morning.

The meeting, in the lobby of the MacLaren Building, was to discuss charges laid Saturday against 114 Simon Fraser University students for occupying the administration building there.

"Pressure must be brought to bear on the attorney-general's department to have the charges dropped," the posters state.

Bob Higinbotham, one of the meeting organizers, said he was expecting between 500 and 600 students to attend.

"We're going to suggest to the students a delegation go to see Attorney-General Leslie Peterson," he said.

"We might also suggest the students mandate the students council to ask the board of governors to do something about the charges at their meeting on Friday."

A news report from Vancouver this morning stated that SFU acting president Dr. Kenneth Strand had decided to ask the attorney-general to consider withdrawal of criminal charges.

S. Viet Decision Hailed by Allies

By REUTERS

The four allies fighting with the United States and South Vietnam today welcomed the Saigon government's decision to join the peace talks in Paris.

The four, Australia, New Zealand, South Korea and Thailand, issued statements complimenting the South Vietnamese government on reversing its position and deciding to attend the talks.

In addition, Japanese and British spokesmen applauded the South Vietnamese decision. A Japanese foreign ministry spokesman said his government hoped peace would be achieved through negotiations as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, South Vietnam's National Liberation Front said it is ready to participate in the enlarged peace talks.

The NLF, political arm of the Viet Cong, will take part in the new conference as an independent party on an equal footing with all the other participants, a spokesman said.

DIPLOMATIC FOUL-UP HAS WILSON BOILING

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — British-West German relations have taken on a sudden chill as the result of a diplomatic foul-up at the height of last week's international monetary crisis.

Just who tripped is not clear, but a clash has developed over German-issued reports that Prime Minister Wilson tried to blackmail West Germany into revaluing the mark.

Wilson is denying it, in undiplomatic language.

The row developed when Germany was under pressure to revalue the mark upwards, supposedly to save French and British currencies. An official German spokesman said in Bonn that Wilson called in the German ambassador here and threatened to withdraw some of Britain's NATO forces from Germany if it was not done.

In the Commons Tuesday night Wilson called the allegation "quite false."

"I very much deplore the leaks—inaccurate leaks—in Bonn about what took place," he said. "I have never known such a thing in four years of communication with over 100 heads of government."

PUT UP ARGUMENT

While Wilson did not say what happened, it develops that he did call in the ambassador and put up a strong argument for German co-operation in maintaining monetary equilibrium by revaluing.

He is reported to have pointed to a recent NATO communique stressing need for sharing the financial burdens of the alliance, which seems to have been carried a step further in the German "leaks."

The ambassador, Dr. Herbert Blankenhorn, confirmed Tuesday that he had not been bullied.

However, a certain amount of German rancor was reported to have been generated at Bonn by table-pounding on the part of Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, at last week's save-the-franc sessions of Western finance ministers. The Germans took the view that the strong mark was being called on unjustifiably, to bail out improvident neighbors.

It probably will take a round of soothing diplomatic notes to get the ruffled national feathers into place.

Critics Hit French Plans

PARIS (AP) — Some French businessmen said today President de Gaulle's austerity program to save the franc isn't austere enough, but a Communist complaint indicated opposition from the working man to an estimated $400,000,000 increase in indirect sales taxes.

Financial sources expressed low-key disappointment at the "mildness" of the belt-tightening measures outlined in the National Assembly Tuesday by Premier Maurice Couve de Murville.

Robert Ballanger, the Communist floor leader, charged that the program "threatens the future of the workers." He declared:

"Once again the government gives fiscal aid to business while making the consumers pay 2,000,000,000 francs more in value-added taxes," he declared.

Couve de Murville told the National Assembly the 1969 budget deficit will be cut to $1,270,000,000 from $2,340,000,000 to strengthen the economy, expand production and protect the franc from the speculation that brought on last week's currency crisis.

He announced cuts in spending to account for more than half of the $1,070,000,000 saving, or about $568,000,000. These include $70,000,000 from the military budget, $30,000,000 from contributions to special industrial projects; $230,000,000 from subsidies to such money-losing nationalized industries as coal, the railways, gas and power; $128,000,000 from government loans and $100,000,000 from administrative expenses.

Tax readjustments will bring in an additional $502,000,000, the premier said, and new collection methods will bring the money in faster, particularly from big companies.

Increases in the added-value tax, an indirect sales tax which does not apply to exports, should help to divert production from the domestic to the foreign market and cut down imports by making them more expensive. Ballanger estimated this would add $400,000,000 a year to the government's revenues, but most or all of this will be offset by abolition of the 4.25 per cent payroll tax for all companies in the export trade.

The added-value tax is a graduated levy on all manufactures and processed foods, imported as well as those produced in France. It is applied at the production level and then passed on to the consumer.

The tax is lowest on staple food items and highest on automobiles and other luxury items. The lowest rate, six per cent, increases to seven. The 13-per-cent category goes up to 15. Items taxed 16.6 per cent now will be taxed 19 per cent, and the top category rises from 20 per cent to 25.

RE-ELECTED president of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party was Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato who defeated two challengers. Sato is a staunch friend of the United States and is strongly promoting renewal of the security treaty between Japan and the U.S. which expires in 1970.

Woman Agent Sparked Drug Raid

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bail or bond ranging from $500 to $10,000 a head was set Tuesday as police completed about two-thirds of arrests authorized in the province's biggest roundup of narcotics suspects.

By today, police had charged 50 of "about 81" persons sought on 65 warrants. Most of the charges are of trafficking in marijuana, hashish and the hallucinatory drug LSD.

Sweeping raids followed four months of undercover work by city policewoman Jean Moss, 23, and RCMP Const. John Grady, 22, who had lived disguised in hippie and skid road company.

Policewoman Moss dyed her hair black and "laid it stringy over her shoulders," said police, as she and Const. Grady attempted to win and hold the confidence of suspected drug traffickers.

The more than 50 raiding officers also held warrants for persons wanted as a holdover from two previous undercover missions by RCMP constables in Vancouver earlier this year.

Tuesday's sweep was the biggest since warrants were issued for 62 persons last February. There was a smaller roundup here Sept. 4 and 15 suspects were picked up in a separate raid in Victoria last weekend.

The first suspects filed before Magistrate Lorre Jackson Tuesday and all were remanded. Highest bail, of $10,000 each, was set for two men charged separately on counts involving heroin traffic.

One, Lorne Peebles, is charged with two counts of trafficking in 35 heroin capsules and another, Ronald Ruocco, is jointly charged with two women with conspiring to traffic in 175 heroin caps.

After a 6:30 a.m. planning meeting, members of the Vancouver and West Vancouver, police departments and RCMP officers swooped on hotels, rooming houses and hippie haunts in Vancouver.

At least three juveniles were picked up and several more sought. At the same time, police apprehended several persons suspected of drug possession but no charges were laid pending laboratory tests.

No bail was sought by one man, Gordon Caswell, 25 charged with selling nine capsules of LSD.

A city police spokesman said that "as far as we know, the policewoman is the first woman to be involved in an undercover operation of this nature in Canada."

Ages of those arrested ranged from 15 to 30. The 15-year-old was charged with trafficking in hashish. So was a 17-year-old and another 17-year-old was charged with selling LSD.

'Consider Another Donation'

Central Saanich Mayor R. Gordon Lee Tuesday urged area residents to throw their weight behind the lagging United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal.

He asked that those who had not yet donated do so, and that those who had already given, consider making an additional donation in light of the current campaign deficit.

"To allow the situation to remain and not meet the objective would leave so many dependent services without sufficient funds to continue their work," he said.

"Perhaps those who have already contributed could consider an additional contribution to put the appeal over the top."

Total collections at noon today stood at $569,111, 86.8 per cent of the $655,000 target.

Faculty Support Demands

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Occupations continued today at two Canadian universities.

Students were conducting sit-ins at McGill University in Montreal and at the University of Ottawa.

Unrest at both campuses revolves around student demands for a voice in university administration There was evidence of faculty support for their goals.

At McGill, the dispute involved political science students who are seeking one-third representation on committees in the political science department.

Prof. J. R. Mallory, chairman of McGill's department of economics and political science, said the department's position is that "students . . . can and should participate in the making of decisions about programs and courses of study."

WANT EQUAL VOICE

At the University of Ottawa, social science students are seeking equal representation on departmental councils.

The faculty council has offered the students one-third representation on faculty and departmental councils.

A vote was also to be held at the University of Ottawa to determine whether students accept the faculty council's offer.

The McGill strike and occupation — affecting about 1,200 students taking political science classes — began after students at a Political Science Association meeting voted 319-179 in favor of the action. Classes given by the department are being boycotted and the department's offices are occupied.

tion of how it would go but 1,827 of the 5,400 students have signed petitions supporting Dr. Strand.

The support was for his actions in calling police to clear the administration centre. One petition, signed by 1,527 students, said specifically they would not support a strike.

The student demands were presented to Dr. Strand with the ultimatum that he reply by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Students said he faced the risk of a student call for his resignation if he did not meet the deadline. He said Tuesday night he had met it.

A major issue is the acceptance by SFU, which has had six registrars and three presidents in 38 months, of studies undertaken in other educational institutions.

Dr. Strand has said the students who protest current admission policies may have a point but he would not bow to force. He said he had not rejected any student demands "out of hand."

Many of the 114 arrested are believed to be from other schools and student groups at other universities and colleges have offered moral and financial support for those arrested Saturday.

Dr. Strand said Tuesday he will call for establishment of a committee of three students and three faculty members as an advisory committee, "the most clear line of communication possible."

The student demands, and the ultimatum to Dr. Strand, were approved by a majority of 2,000 students who attended a rally Monday. They were presented to him by the student council.

The secret ballot, which started at noon today, asks students whether they favor a general strike to start Thursday and last "until Strand has dealt satisfactorily with the motions passed Monday."

On the motion demanding an early senate meeting, Dr. Strand said no meeting could be held before 72 hours, This was close to Monday's regular meeting so no special session would be held before then.

SFU Sit-In Special Edition Issued in City

About 2,000 copies of a combined issue of mainland university student papers appeared Tuesday in Victoria.

The issue is a 12-page special edition dealing with the Simon Fraser University sit-in and arrest of 114 students.

Staffs of the SFU paper, The Peak, and the University of B.C. paper, The Ubyssey, put out the edition.

Student writers filled the 12 pages with reporting and editorializing on the sit-in and police action.

One page is filled with duplications allegedly from private files of SFU administrators.

U.K. Pound Climbs To Pre-Crisis Rate

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The British pound climbed today to its best rate since the monetary crisis broke last week as Europe's foreign exchange markets continued calm. But the French franc remained on or near the floor.

The rate in London ranged between $2.3870 to $2.3875 U.S.

London dealers said currency speculators stayed out of the market and probably would continue to stay out for a while unless a panic developed before the weekend.

The franc remained low, and the Bank of France was believed supporting the rate by selling foreign exchange.

But the price of French banknotes rose in Frankfurt and Zurich, reflecting a mixture of confidence in the new French austerity regime and the new police measures controlling the export of French currency. (See story Page 2.)

Gold firmed slightly on the London market to $39.75 an ounce. Turnover was moderate but quiet. South Africa was believed to have cut off its supplies to the market until the price rose again, probably to the $40 level.

The U.S. dollar continued to climb on the Frankfurt money market as the demand for U.S. currency remained strong in West Germany.

'What Have They To Feast About?'

MANNINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — The families of 78 miners trapped for a week in a burning coal mine face a sad U.S. Thanksgiving Day Thursday.

"What have these people got to feast about?" asked Mrs. Robert Friend of Parkersburg, whose brother is among the trapped miners.

"You know how most of these families will be spending Thanksgiving," said one miner. "They'll be right there in the church praying—like they have all along."

Last Wednesday at 5:40 a.m. the first explosion boomed through Mountaineer Coal. Co. No. 9 mine, just as the 99 men on the midnight shift were about to quit. Twenty-one ran to safety or were pulled from the smoking pits.

There has been no contact with any of the other men despite around-the-clock rescue efforts. And another explosion—the 14th in seven days—hit the mine Tuesday just after the president of Consolidation Coal Co., John Corcoran, vowed that the search would continue as long as there was even a remote possibility of finding the men alive.

Company officials termed the eruption at one of the mine's portals a "major explosion" but would not comment on what effect it might have on further rescue plans.

given a "provisional" answer to questions about Canada's commitment when Canada promised not to reduce its European force in the next year. That decision was presented to the NATO ministers last week in Brussels.

In a weekend speech, Postmaster-General Kierans suggested Canada's troops in West Germany be withdrawn and assigned as part of a United Nations peacekeeping force in Vietnam.

Mr. Cadieux replied to Commons questions that he has "been led to believe that what we are doing in Europe could be also called peacekeeping."

He said Tuesday fears among Western allies that Canada might withdraw its European forces were not as widespread as reports have indicated.

Canada has the opportunity to give a year's notice of withdrawal from NATO next year.

Asked whether he thought notice would be given, Mr. Cadieux said he did not know, but added that he favored strong collective security.

Czech Refinery Fire

PRAGUE (AP) — An explosion and fire today destroyed the major part of the equipment of Czechoslovakia's largest oil refinery, the Slovnaft Works at Bratislava, but no one was hurt, the news agency CTK reported.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Westerly winds will continue to bring in moist air from the ocean and skies will be mostly cloudy on the coast today. Showers will be scattered over coastal areas this morning but should end this afternoon due to a steady rise in pressure. The protection of the coastal mountains will allow interior regions to enjoy sunny weather. Far to the west a disturbance is grouping its forces and will begin advancing toward British Columbia later today. It will bring rain to the exposed coasts Thursday morning and to the lower mainland Thursday afternoon. Not much change in temperature is expected.

Stiffer Press Controls Due In S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The threat of stiffer government controls on the press and a massive merger plan that appears to have failed have shaken South Africa's newspaper world.

In unrelated moves this month, a cabinet minister proposed tightening of press regulations and a merger was proposed which would have linked most English-language papers in South Africa.

But in Cape Town today it was indicated the big merger is off, at least for the present, in the face of a government announcement of legislation to block the deal.

Interior Minister S. Lourenu Muller said reporting standards and the quality of newspaper articles had dropped to such a low moral level that the government was considering legislative controls. Muller said newspapers may be brought under the Publications and Entertainments Act, which bars material "indecent, obscene, offensive, harmful to public morals or blasphemous."

Playboy magazine is kept out of South Africa under this legislation. So are such films as Bonnie and Clyde, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, The Graduate and In the Heat of the Night.

Several thousand books are banned, including titles by D. H. Lawrence, Norman Mailer, John O'Hara, Leon Uris and Brendan Behan.

In another development in the newspaper field, the Argus group, largest newspaper chain in Africa, had announced plans to buy control of South African Associated Newspapers Ltd.

But Clive Corder, chairman of the Bailey Trust and Estate, said his company would not sell its 65.9 per cent holding in South African Associated Newspapers to the Argus group.

Shortly after Corder's announcement, the Argus group released major shareholders of Associated Newspapers from agreements to sell Argus a controlling interest.

The proposed combine would have controlled 77 per cent of English-language daily circulation and 88 per cent of English Sunday circulation. Only four of South Africa's 14 English dailies would have remained outside the merged companies.

Purchase of Associated Newspapers for $6,300,000 would have given Argus control of all daily newspapers in Rhodesia and the biggest papers of Johannesburg, Durban and Cape Town.

Cyclist Killed

CLOVERDALE (CP) — Michael Herd, 12, of South Surrey, was killed Tuesday when his bicycle was hit by a car near here. Police said the car was attempting to avoid his brother, Randy, 8, who was taken to hospital with head and leg injuries.

New Coalition Gov't Indicated in Italy

ROME (AP) — Premier-designate Mariano Rumor conferred today with members of Italy's last centre-left coalition cabinet. There was general expectation that he would be able to ally his Christian Democrats with the Socialists again and give Italy a majority government for the first time in six months.

With Rumor's designation by President Giuseppe Saragat Tuesday night, the political mood turned suddenly more optimistic than at any time since the Socialists pulled out of the government and let the centre-left collapse after the national election last May.

Since then, a majority of the Socialist leaders have concluded that though their party suffered a setback in the election, a renewal of the partnership with the Christian Democrats and the small Republican Party is the only chance for an effective government.

Even before the 53-year-old Rumor got the mandate, the Socialists said they would accept anybody the Christian Democrats put up.

Rumor still has plenty of tough bargaining ahead to hammer out a program of reforms acceptable to both the Socialists and the right wing of his own party. But the prospect for renewal of the centre-left has never looked better.

TAX HIKES MAY CAUSE U.K. CIGARETTE WAR

LONDON (AP)—New taxes imposed during the world monetary crisis threatened today to start a cigarette price war in Britain.

The government slapped an additional tax of five cents a pack on cigarettes as one of many steps to support the pound sterling.

Britain's third largest tobacco company, Carreras, announced it would absorb four cents of the boost, and dealers said other tobacco companies might be forced to change their prices to compete.

The new tax raise—the third in the last eight months—brought the price of the most expensive brands to 74 cents.

MERCY PLANE ATTACKED

GENEVA (AP) — An International Red Cross plane was machine-gunned Tuesday as it was being unloaded on the Biafran landing strip at Uli, a Red Cross spokesman said today.

The spokesman said there were a number of African casualties in the attack, but the plane crew escaped unhurt although 22 rounds pierced the plane. He said first reports did not indicate whether the firing came from the air or ground.

The plane had been provided by the West German government to carry relief supplies.

A spokesman for the Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief service, dismissed as "preposterous" Nigerian charges that a radical wing of the Catholic Church in the United States financed recruitments and transport of mercenaries to Biafra.

The Lagos government said Tuesday night that 200 mercenaries were sent to Biafra via Gabon and were financed by Irish Catholics in the United States and in Ireland.

British Trying To Free Newsman Held in Peking

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government is holding urgent consultations with its mission in Peking about effective steps to obtain the release of Reuters correspondent Anthony Grey, the foreign office reported today.

A statement issued by the foreign office said: "We deplore the conditions in which Mr. Grey has been held, as revealed by yesterday evening's statement."

This referred to a statement put out following a visit to Grey of two representatives of the British mission in Peking Tuesday.

Grey, 30, has been restricted to his house in Peking for the last 16 months.

HONG KONG (AP) — The Hong Kong Star says Communist China is willing to release Reuters correspondent Anthony Grey from house arrest in Peking if Hong Kong releases 13 pro-Communist Chinese reporters jailed here.

Tito Grants Amnesty

BELGRADE (AP)—President Tito Wednesday granted amnesty to 936 convicts on the 25th anniversary of the Parliament his partisans established on the territory they liberated from the Nazis. Tito's decree released 147 convicts and shortened the term of 789.

Viet Cong Buildup In Saigon Smashed

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese police have arrested 85 Viet Cong political workers in Saigon during a two-week-long roundup to crush an emerging Communist political apparatus in the capital, a high police source said today.

The source said 15 were women and that all of those arrested had pro-Communist records. Most of them were long-time residents of Saigon, he added.

The roundup began Nov. 11 and still is going on. The source said it began with the arrest of a senior Communist lieutenant who tipped off police to 16 Viet Cong cells within the city.

The citywide hunt also has netted 14 Chinese pistols, a number of mines, grenades and plastic explosives, the source reported.

The South Vietnamese arm of North Vietnam's Communist party is known to be creating a grass-roots government across South Vietnam, apparently in anticipation of an end to the Vietnam war.

American intelligence confirms the quasi-government already exists throughout five provinces and in more than 1,000 villages and hamlets. Communist documents claim the existence of "liberation councils" in two of Saigon's nine precincts, but U.S. officials say the councils exist only on paper.

Only scattered ground fighting was reported in South Vietnam today.

A U.S. marine force that had gone into the demilitarized zone for the first time since the bombing of North Vietnam halted Nov. 1 pulled out by nightfall Tuesday, the U.S. command said.

Five marines were killed inside the demilitarized zone, a U.S. spokesman announced.

Information Chief Quits

SAIGON (Reuters) — South Vietnamese Premier Tran Van Huong today accepted the resignation of information minister Ton That Thien, reliable sources said.

Thien said repeatedly last month that South Vietnam would walk out of any peace talks if a participant identified himself as a member of the Nationalist Liberation Front, political wing of the Viet Cong.

Rescue Operation

FRANCE HAS EVIDENTLY DE-cided to devalue its fame instead of its franc. President de Gaulle has nurtured a number of pet projects designed to raise the position of his country in the international theatre. At the cost of enormous treasury appropriations and the anxiety of his Western allies he persisted in a nuclear bomb development program that not only drained funds from domestic social needs but seriously upset the anti-proliferation hopes of the nuclear club nations. The super-jet Concorde plane to be developed in association with Britain was another expensive prestige item.

General de Gaulle's actions in the Common Market, from which he excluded Britain with a contemptuous word, his attitude toward NATO and the common system devised to defend Europe, his conduct toward nations which in the past had been friends-in-need to France —his entire national policy was designed to restore to his country as quickly as possible the prestige which had been lost in the wartime occupation and the postwar domestic turmoil and indecision.

Now the nuclear project, the Concorde show-piece—perhaps even the autocratic manner toward possible customers—will be temporarily shelved in favor of protecting a still more desired form of prestige: the value of the French currency, which for President de Gaulle is the measure of France's regained position in the world. For the time being the whole effort of France must be centered on preventing devaluation of the franc.

The President's indomitable stand initially has shown results, as speculators in exchange appear to believe that the previously expected devaluation will not take place. This has eased the pressure on the exchange rate. But the alternative is a grim one too. It means belt-tightening in a nation which only last May showed a vast impatience with social conditions, with educational sacred cows, with agricultural prices, with industrial wages. And abandonment of some of last summer's forced reforms, even if accompanied by an irrestible Gaullist appeal to patriotism and the demands of the emergency, may not long be tolerated by a nation in which many elements of unrest are still very much alive.

The problem of France, like that of Britain—not to mention Canada —is to increase exports or decrease imports, or both, in order to halt the attrition of the national reserves which inevitably puts a strain on the value of the home currency in terms of other currencies. In the present case of France, the high valuation of the West German mark —high because of the very favorable export-import ratio the Germans have established—has been a major aggravation of the problem, and speculators have been quick to seize on the prospect of a double killing; devaluation by France and upward revaluation by Bonn.

At a price, President de Gaulle has moved to stabilize the franc. It may be a price the people of France are unwilling to pay for very long. But the General can, for the moment, claim a rather unusual distinction: While he may in many respects be blamed for France's predicament today, he is at the same time probably the only antidote for the malady. If self-levitation by the bootstraps is possible, General de Gaulle is France's best hope.

Long Beach Park

NEW ENCOURAGEMENT HAS been given to hopes for a national park at Long Beach by conversations between British Columbia's minister of recreation and conservation, Mr. Kenneth Kiernan, and Mr. Jean Chretien, the federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development, in whose jurisdiction national parks reside. The outlook, says Mr. Kiernan, is optimistic. For his part, Mr. Chretien reportedly agrees with the opinion that the time to act is now, not five years hence.

The desirability of prompt action stems from a new concept of the park, involving a much larger area than had been previously contemplated. This, in turn, calls for despatch to acquire some privately-held properties which would come within the boundaries of the proposed recreation area.

The merits of Long Beach, with its splendid stretch of sand washed by the open Pacific, have been detailed by enthusiasts for years. Periodically the interest of federal parks authorities has been aroused. Mr. Chretien appears enthusiastic and presumably is in a position to persuade his cabinet colleagues that the time has come for Canada to acquire its first national park on this coast.

No one discounts the problems to be solved before the objective is reached. They can, however, be overcome if provincial and federal departments co-operate. Progress in negotiations will be watched eagerly by residents of Vancouver Island and British Columbia. They are heartened by the promise that, at long last, maritime national parks on the Atlantic are to be partially balanced on the Pacific—and in a location of unique attraction.

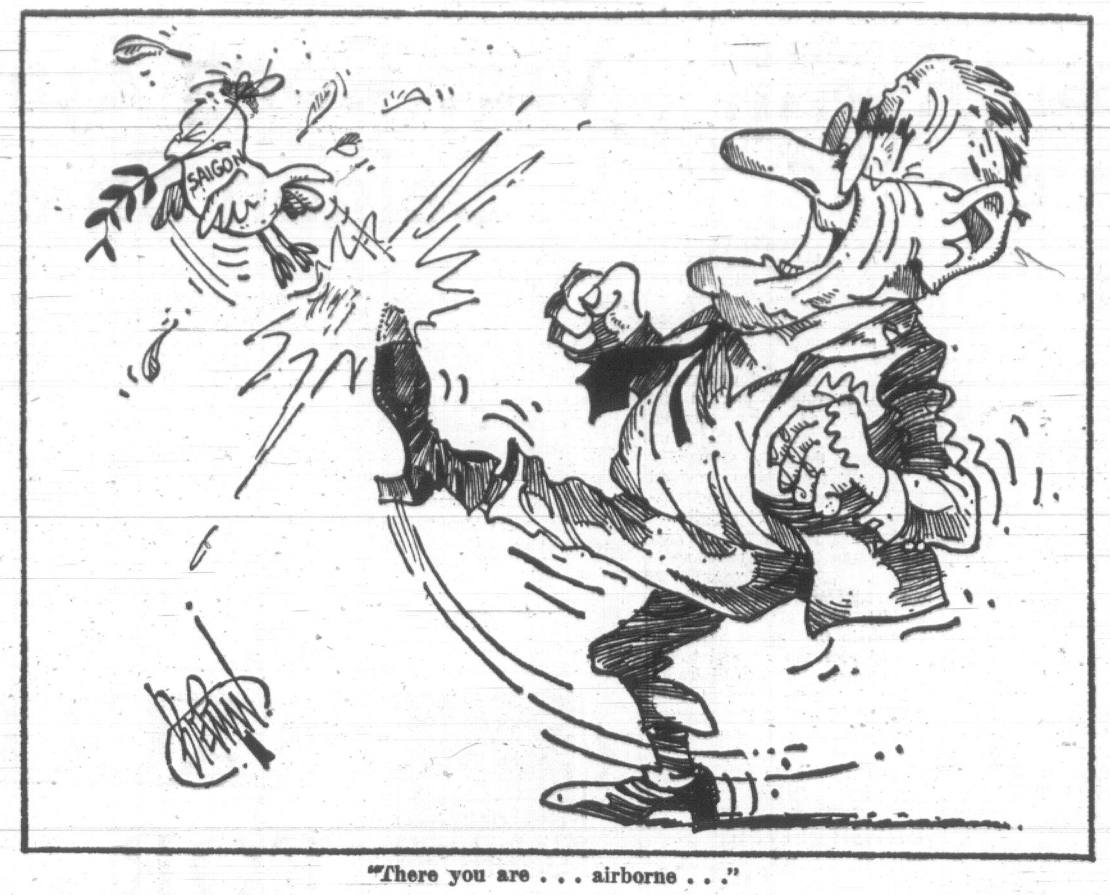
Stripping the Landscape

PREMIER BENNETT WAS LESS than reassuring this week when he linked strip mining with Butchart Gardens. If the limestone quarry had been filled in, said Mr. Bennett, there would have been no sunken garden. Ergo, we would not want to make the mining companies close up their massive holes in case we lose the opportunity for some future botanical showplace. He must have been putting us on.

Just how ugly are the scars left by the strip and open-pit miners was vividly pictured in a special CBC program last weekend. The film should have frightened every British Columbian who saw it, especially when it was followed by Mr. Bennett's little joke. Most of the scenes were in Kentucky where coal mining has ravaged the countryside. The Governor of the state, Mr. Louis Nunn, said the people became aware of the devastation too late and he warned Canadians not to let it happen here. Mr. Bennett should take Governor Nunn's words to heart. The damage is twofold: the large heaps of waste and the unsightly holes.

The premier said the "best possible controls" will be imposed in this province, where at least 12 open-pit mining operations are in existence now. In view of the government's past attitude toward mines and parks this vague phrase means little. The public's greatest concern should be over the revived coal mining operations in the Fernie area. The Kaiser Corporation has already embarked on its program to extract four to five million tons of coal annually to be shipped to Japan via the Roberts Bank superport.

It was waste from the Kaiser operation which slid down across the Southern Trans-Provincial Highway last weekend, burying two people alive in their car. Strip mining can apparently be dangerous as well as unsightly. The question must be asked why the government has not enforced controls before now. The matter has been under study by a special government-industry committee established at the request of the Legislature, and Mines Minister Richter says its report will be studied by the cabinet next month. Legislation must follow quickly or the boast of "Beautiful British Columbia" will have a few holes in it.



"There you are . . . airborne . . ."

FROM LONDON — By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

A Macabre Episode in Leninist History

THIS month's meeting of Communist parties in Budapest was one of the more macabre episodes in the history of Leninism. Only three months ago Communists all over the world were shocked and outraged by the Soviet display of brute force in Czechoslovakia. They knew that the Red Army had moved in, not to salvage any Communist ideal, but to shore up Soviet power.

Only a fortnight ago Brezhnev formally proclaimed his new doctrine, his solitary contribution to the history of ideas: that Communist States may and must intervene with force to prevent other Communist States from departing from socialism as currently defined in the Kremlin. The fraternal parties know what to make of that.

Czech Repression

Only a few days ago, while the comrades were meeting in Budapest, the Czech experiment, just across the border, was reaching the last stages of extinction.

What did the fraternal parties talk about? Why did they choose to meet?

What they said is anybody's guess. All we know so far is that the Russian delegation tried to behave as though nothing out of the way had been done in Czechoslovakia, and required the others to limit themselves to discussion of a document drawn up by the Italian Party before the march into Prague.

In vain. As for why they met, on the side of Russia and her now-obedient satellites it was the latest move in an obsessive process, started by Khrushchev in the spring of 1964 and revived by Brezhnev as soon as he felt strong enough to throw his weight about — i.e. in the autumn of 1965. The Russians wanted a Communist summit meeting to pronounce anathema on the Chinese Communist Party.

Resistance

But they met with very strong resistance. The chief resisters outside the Soviet bloc were the very strong and important Italian Communists, inside the bloc the Romanians. These had plenty of allies.

Their ostensible reason for resisting was that a meeting of all the parties could only destroy the unity of the world Communist movement. There were some (notably Mr. Gomulka's Poles) who genuinely felt this. But the Italians, the Romanians and many others resisted because the Communist movement was already fragmented, and they liked it that way. So long as China remained formally within the pale, Moscow could not hope to re-impose absolute authority over other parties. Once China was out, then Moscow could again present itself as the unchallenged master of the Communist world.

Khrushchev staked a great deal on pulling off this meeting. He had fixed a preparatory conference for December 1964. But in October he fell. Brezhnev postponed the conference until the following March; but when it took place it was abortive. It was not until the autumn of the following year that the Russians openly returned to the attack. They pressed for a conference in the spring of 1966, but the resisters stonewalled. They went on pressing, but it was not until this year that they succeeded in getting anywhere at all. Even then, it is improbable that this month's preparatory meeting would have taken place but for involuntary American aid: for American behavior in Vietnam has for long provided the one visible rallying point for Communists everywhere.

Why, at a time when distaste for Moscow's policies is deeper than ever before among the fraternal parties, does Brezhnev go on pushing so hard? Why is he insisting on a full scale conference in the spring of next year? And why do parties, like the Italian, who have held aloof for so long, turn up in Budapest?

Change for Worse

As far as Moscow is concerned, things have changed sharply for the worse since Khrushchev demanded his conference, profiting by the violence and recklessness of the Chinese, which had alienated many who had first believed that Peking was more sinned against than sinning. Now, as far as the Communist world is concerned, China, for the time being, is a side issue. The agenda for the new conference, if in fact it does take place, will be very different from the agenda originally planned.

Moscow can only be interested in picking up the pieces after a catastrophic year and in a straight reaffirmation of its absolute authority over such Communist parties as it can coerce or blackmail into submission. It seems likely that at least some of the foreign Communist parties which attended at Budapest went there in an attempt to meet this threat before it could develop further.

The spirit moving Brezhnev is the spirit behind his new doctrine — the threat of physical force against any heretical Communist State (is Yugoslavia currently regarded as a Communist State within the meaning of the act?) — which attempts to deviate from the Kremlin line. Any Communist party outside the Communist bloc must consider itself by implication also bound by Moscow's decision — unless it formally declares that it is not so bound.

Deviation Conflict

The recent conference clearly marked a stage in what will be a long-drawn-out struggle to retain for parties outside the bloc the right — now denied to bloc parties — to pursue what the Russians call socialism by different roads. It is barely conceivable that some of the parties, for example the Italian party, will surrender this very hard-won right. Must they be excommunicated from the Communist fraternity? Or does Brezhnev visualize a solution in which the bloc countries are regarded simply as part of the Soviet power complex, while the non-bloc countries are allowed to exist in limbo, a sort of shadow international kept in being by Moscow, and adhered to by its members for the sake of appearances?

It will be interesting to see. There are strong and various reasons for foreign parties to feel the need to show solidarity with Moscow; but few can actively desire it. To sup with Brezhnev they will need an extra long spoon.

Supporting Wallace, Strand

In view of the recent over-exposure of student unrest given by your paper to Victoria residents, I feel it is my duty as a student at UVic to draw your attention to the danger such exposure might induce in the public eye.

I would like to inform your reading public that most of the rabble-rousing currently going on at UVic is being instigated by a small minority — in fact a handful — of confused students.

I am continually annoyed at reading comments such as "the students at UVic . . . or the UVic student body, and/or government" has denounced this, that, or the next thing, without any indication being given the public as to the exact number of students involved in reaching these decisions.

Let me publicly state on my own behalf, and that of 95 per cent of the student body, that our primary concern in attending UVic is to obtain a sound education, and that we frown, as do those of the older generation, upon that "small select group" whose activities place our "right" to learn in serious jeopardy. I for one, in spite of what the UVic student council has determined, totally support acting president Wallace's approval of Dr. Strand's actions at SFU, and am relieved to find these two men stepping in with actions strong enough to squelch the antics of the small group of student clowns, whose dissent is threatening the future of Canadian academic freedom. — Ronald P. Bermingham, Arts & Science, 1404 Harrison.

Lost Revenue

Well, last week, Saanich council shot down another zoning bylaw, and thereby lost for the municipality taxes amounting to over $10,000 per year and 54 greatly-needed housing units.

Last month they turned down such a bylaw for 90 units and about $20,000 per year in taxes. These bylaws were refused because of the objections of a handful of people living in the area for a variety of very selfish reasons.

The council is supposed to represent the whole of Saanich. It is continually asking the taxpayers to approve of large expenditures for sewers, hospitals, parks, etc., but will not approve of measures which would help to pay for all these things. The time has come for the people of Saanich to demand that the council think of these things a little more seriously, act as the real representatives of all Saanich and not just politicians afraid of losing a few votes.

Let us think about this next month when our aldermen are asking for our support at the polls.—A Saanich Taxpayer.

Condemning the Crystal

One wonders why Alderman Frampton has continually indicated over the past several months, according to the press, his desire to condemn the dear old Crystal Garden and to dwell on its supposedly unsafe condition. It's very puzzling!

If it has been so unsafe over all these months, why allow children to enter it?

Why hasn't Council had the city's building inspectors and fire department inspectors condemn it long ago?

If an Olympic-size pool is needed, let's build one on the vacant land to the north, and leave the existing pool to the children, but not find more excuses to demolish the old building. Properly administered it can be made to pay its way, without subsidies. — "Wondering."

TANAN, SOUTH VIETNAM — By JOSEPH ALSOP

'Penny Packet' Losses Erode the VC

THE helicopter circled interminably. The exchanges between the battalion commander and his commanders, audible by command radio, were all in the U.S. Army's version of pig latin. The gun ships, the fighter bombers, the artillery, made the target area plume and plume again with the dark smokes of war. Then the "insertions" occurred. The flights of choppers swooped down like dragon flies in a hurry. The men of the U.S. Ninth Infantry Division poured out of the choppers and formed their line in the rice paddies, looking like highly organized ants from the altitude where mere observers hover. The line moved up on the square patch of nipa and coconut palms which was the target area.

Alsop

When it was all over, another penny packet of enemy troops had been accounted for. Bunker after hidden bunker had been blown up, so that they would not be there again to shelter the enemy. And two or three substantial caches, mainly of weapons, including a couple of rockets for use against Saigon, were also destroyed with a good deal more ease than the mud-and-coconut-log bunkers.

It was a pretty representative operation — not a "dry hole" but not a dramatic success — in this phase of the war in Longan province. It required, as the army says nowadays, a lot of assets. It produced what would appear to be a minimal result, for scores of men, backed up by all these powerful U.S. assets, had been used to wipe out a hiding-hole, its local supplies, and a little less than a score of men belonging to the enemy.

Broken Battalions

Yet consider the cumulative result of this persistent daily erosion. Less than 10 months ago, before the Tet "victory offensive," the VC in Longan province had eight full strength main force battalions, plus full strength local force companies for each of the province's administrative districts. All, moreover, were true VC — in other words, South Vietnamese.

Today, in contrast, the battalions number only five, because erosion has enforced mergers. The local force companies are now at half strength, and main force battalions are no better off.

Above all, these main force battalions on the near approaches to Saigon, which so recently were true VC outfits, are today on average about 60 per cent North Vietnamese outfits. They have simply been unable to find southerners to fill gaps in the ranks either in Longan, or even in the southern delta provinces, which they used to draw upon so freely for men and even for whole reinforcing units.

The captured documents furthermore reveal a constant, desperate clamor, both by the party committee and by the provincial military command, for more and more North Vietnamese to give the Longan units greater fighting strength. And for the present, because the helicopters of the Ninth Division may swoop down anywhere, even Longan's main force battalions live and move and, above all, flee from combat, in little groups of five and 10 men each.

No Pacification in Sight

This does not mean that Longan's obstinately tough and resilient VC structure is about to collapse tomorrow morning, or next month, or the month after that. It does not mean, either, that Longan is anywhere near being "pacified," in the jargon of Saigon. It will never be really pacified as long as the main force battalions are still capable of reassembling and striking down by surprise any significant part of what has been painstakingly built up.

But the situation of the VC-NVA forces in Longan does mean something else that should be obvious. Either the Hanoi war-planners must get ready to pay a vastly bigger bill for North Vietnamese manpower, or they must prepare for this province's VC structure collapsing, or imploding, or otherwise becoming virtually ineffectual in the end.

Northern Replacements

A fair number of North Vietnamese replacements are just reported as arriving here. But one more infiltration group will not solve the problem in Longan, or for that matter in Kienhoa or Dinhtuong, or the other VC stronghold-provinces this reporter has just visited. Even in the Delta, the plight of the VC can in fact be defined as ever increasing, ever more urgent need for North Vietanmese manpower not in hundreds but in many thousands per month in order to keep the show on the road.

Quebec Anglophones Try to Adjust

MacLENNAN

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONTREAL — Some English-speaking Quebecers have long sipped the wine of ascendancy; now the vinegar taste of minority status is also becoming familiar.

Though still economically dominant, the so-called anglophones are learning as never before the look of majority power from the outside. It all started from an explosion.

"The point is that an explosion on the French side can't be a half-way thing," said educationist David Munroe. "It hits the English side as well."

Dr. Munroe was discussing education but his words light up the almost revolutionary situation enveloping Quebec's non-French, highly diverse population of more than 1,000,000, roughly one-fifth of the province's total.

"English-speaking Quebecers are adjusting their thinking to a new type of living—it's as simple and as profound as that," said John T. McIlhone, director of English schools for the Montreal Catholic school commission.

"In making decisions now we have to be aware—Protestant or Roman Catholic—that we're a minority because this has been called to our attention by the French majority."

What is the mood and profile of the anglophones as Gallic aspirations vault ever higher in the heartland of French Canada?

Lightning Flash

For many, the now-famed St. Leonard school incident was like a lightning flash illuminating a threat to English rights. A suburban school board began phasing out English in bilingual primary schools and imposed a distinction between the rights of "Anglo-Saxons" and New Canadians to English-language teaching.

In late November, after reading copies of a brief presented by seven Montreal-based organizations recommending a dual-language education system for the province, Premier Bertrand said immigrants will be able to choose the language of their children's instruction providing it is in English or French. Members of the Dual Language Committee said Mr. Bertrand promised legislation by the end of the year which would limit imposition of unilingualism by school boards.

Cry Like Hell

"They cry like hell about the St. Leonard affair but there wasn't a word from them about the plight of French-Canadians in other provinces over the last 100 years," said Gerard Filion, industrialist and former editor of the newspaper Le Devoir.

A new frankness is apparent. Anglophone feelings erupted with passion and this, some long-time observers say, is an encouraging change even if it leads to short-term acrimony.

"We have a new desire for more open expression," said Mayor Reginald Dawson of the Town of Mount Royal, junior sister to the separate city of Westmount in Montreal affluence. "The old idea was we shouldn't rock the boat.

"It's all very well for the English to go around asking what the French want. Well, let's get to the bottom of it. Let's say what we want too."

Then Mr. Dawson, a leading chartered accountant, did some straight talking of his own: "Almost daily we are bombarded by the irresponsible mouthings of ultra-nationalists, separatists and their ilk who are attempting to impose an all-or-nothing solution."

McILHONE

Quebec anglophones, outnumbering the total populations of most other provinces, are so many, mixed and mobile that apparently divergent sketches can have equal validity.

"We're one of the most wealthy and highly educated identifiable groups in North America," said Michael K. Oliver, vice-principal of McGill University and research director of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

"The biggest myth the French-Canadians have to get rid of is that there is an English-speaking community in Montreal," said Prof. Terry Copp, who teaches history at Loyola College and McGill.

FILION

"There is no such community and never has been. Persons who knew English in Montreal have always been a remarkably heterogeneous group, divided in religion, ethnic origin and above all on class lines. . . .

"They are a very normal cross-section of the Canadian population. True, compared with the French, they have a higher concentration in the upper income bracket. But the vast majority have the same economic profile as the French-speaking group."

No Leadership

And there is no common leadership, said Prof. Copp, because it would take even more than the Quiet Revolution—or Dr. Munroe's "explosion"—to unite Westmount's financial mandarins and the immigrant stevedores in Montreal's east end.

Novelist Hugh MacLennan, the Nova Scotian whose phrase "two solitudes" has entered the language as a tag for Quebec, noted with some pain an article by one of his respected historian friends. This was to the effect that English-speaking Quebecers had so little to be admired in the past that they could be written off now.

Attitude Gone

"That old establishment is gone now and the attitude is gone," said Mr. MacLennan, professor of English at McGill. "I think that during these crisis years the English-speaking people here who played a major role in coming together with the French-Canadians were born in other parts of the country. Not all, but a good many were."

Mr. MacLennan's illustrious McGill predecessor, Stephen Leacock, wrote of the plutocrats who ruled Montreal in an oppressive atmosphere in the early 1900s:

"Those of us who remember the era can think of one such, richest of all perhaps, whose simple evenings were spent alone, reading the evening newspaper under a droplight, smokeless . . . drinkless, for he didn't care for it, and speechless, for he seldom had much to say, except 'yes' for another million."

Such a man would find the common people restless indeed today. But there are constants. St. Lawrence Blvd., that garish street known as The Main, remains roughly the great divide of race and affluence for Montreal—and, some sociologists say, for Canada as well—the rich to the west, the poor to the east.

Montreal Area

And Montreal is where the anglophones are found in increasing numbers. Four-fifths of the province's English-speaking population lives within 25 miles of Montreal's international airport in suburban Dorval.

While Quebec's non-French minority has remained proportionately fairly constant—22 per cent at Confederation compared with 19 per cent now—the makeup has radically changed, bringing further linguistic conflict.

More than 500,000 immigrants settled or paused in Quebec—mostly in Montreal—between 1945 and 1965 and all major groups except the Italians, the biggest, have in the great majority adopted English as their language.

OLIVER

The 1961 census showed 751,949 non-French residents in Montreal, only 377,625 of them British origin, compared with 1,439,460 French. Forty-five per cent of the non-French adults were born outside Canada, and many others came from sister provinces—the ratio being as high as 30 per cent in some Montreal suburbs.

A report prepared by three economists indicated that on 1961 census figures British-origin workers led all others in Quebec in average salary—35 per cent above the French-Canadians, who were trailed only by Italians and Indians.

Others Ahead

The study recognized that income is likely to be lower, for whatever racial origin, in Abitibi, say, than Montreal. Nevertheless in these figures Scandinavians, Netherlanders, Jews, Russians, Germans, Poles, Asians, Ukrainians and Hungarians all led the French-Canadians.

Still, every other day newspapers carry reports of another French-Canadian climbing the ladders of industry and finance. One long-time industrialist describes the thinking of his English-speaking confreres:

"Most of them like to see the French-Canadians getting a better break than in the past, but they would couple this with the valid statement that it now is possible under the educational system for this to happen whereas in the past it was not.

"We had a certain amount of prejudice and a certain amount of trouble to get the right French-Canadian people because of their educational background.

"Even today it is much harder for a French-speaking Canadian to get to the top. With equal ability, he must also be perhaps not equal but good in English."

Italian Influx

Bilingualism and rapport among lawyers is considered better than in other professions. One financial authority said the English lawyer who can speak French is and probably will remain in a better position than the French lawyer who speaks English, because of American business. But bilingualism is increasingly essential.

In another sphere, nearly 100,000 Italians have hit Quebec since the war alone, and bare statistics tell little of the thrust of this group, somewhat reminiscent of the Irish influx of another era.

Though still economically dominant, Quebec's English-speaking minority — the anglophones — are facing revolutionary changes. In this first of three articles Joseph MacSween of The Canadian Press reports on this facet in the province's life.

They work, intermarry and attend festivities with the French-Canadians. They acquire property and education at a phenomenal rate. They become small contractors and storekeepers to an unusual degree.

"The Italians are English in business and French in love," said Mr. Filion.

Population projections indicate the world's second-largest French-speaking city could be predominantly English-speaking within a few decades as, indeed, it was for a period before Confederation. The Montreal work force is already about 45 per cent English-speaking.

Sympathize

The great majority of anglophones sympathize with Quebec government concern to make French a necessary language in Quebec life without measures that would dry up needed immigration and arouse such insecurity that those anglophones most useful in the further development of the province would be driven away.

One business source said government plans to make French the working language of Quebec must be viewed in two ways. Any legislation to this effect would drive out international head offices doing business in English. But operations within the Quebec sphere and at plant level were something else again.

"We're going to have to move out of that situation where English is the normal language once you get above the foreman level in most factories," said Dr. Oliver, the vice-principal of McGill, traditional pinnacle and symbol of English-language supremacy.

Truculent

"Any English-Canadian here who does not make sure his children are very fluent in French is an idiot."

The trouble is that some Quebec leaders in government and other fields surround legitimate statements with such nationalist fervor and truculence that anglophones are frightened. Are they simply over-sensitive?

"Oh no, they're being provoked every day," said Laurier LaPierre, professor-politician who calls himself a French-Canadian nationalist—not a Quebec nationalist.

A series of interviews showed that just as French-Canadians fear drowning in an English-language North American sea, so some anglophones here see themselves swimming hard in a French-language lake turbulent with nationalism.

There was a recurring theme: The French-Canadians are about to demonstrate for the first time from a position of real power their attitude toward the rights of minorities in educational and linguistic fields.

"The natural tendency of a minority is to try to cut itself off so that it can act as a majority," said Dr. Munroe, vice-chairman of Quebec's Superior Council of Education who also acted as vice-chairman of a vastly important royal commission on education.

MALONE

"This is pretty much what the English community has been able to do in Quebec. We're coming face to face now with a minority situation for the first time."

But Canada's constitution imposes certain guarantees for the English language in Quebec, the only bilingual province since Confederation. Why the unease now? The experience of the English Protestant minority here has been incomparably better than that of French Catholics elsewhere.

"That is often explained in terms of the generosity of the French-Canadians," said Dr. Oliver. "I don't want to suggest that this is unimportant.

"But I don't think it is the main factor. Unlike the French-language minorities in other provinces, the minority here was economically a dominant one . . ."

Lawyer-author T. P. Slattery, who is perhaps typical of those English-speaking Quebecers steeped in history and love of the province, said there is undoubtedly more minority freedom here. He knew of no court or legal linguistic injustices such as crop up in other provinces.

"Is it due to generous tolerance? I'd say in part, but not entirely.

Jews Excluded

"Go back 30 or 40 years. Look at the English-speaking Protestant group that controlled—to the exclusion of Jews and English-speaking Catholics—the banks, McGill and so on. To say the French-Canadian numerical majority dealt with a minority in them is just using words. It is only now the comparison is becoming more valid."

But it was always a French-Canadian government and anglophones today still predominate in the ranks of the industrial mighty. Why is the power picture different?

Pierre Elliott Trudeau, long before he became prime minister, castigated both French- and English-Canadians for the way democracy was abused in Quebec.

The French, he said, took to the parliamentary system merely as a device for preserving their culture. The English acted as if democracy was not for the French-Canadians.

"That this is so is forcefully confirmed by the English-Canadian behavior in local politics in Quebec," Mr. Trudeau wrote.

Mr. Filion said he agrees generally with the Trudeau thesis that English corporations distributed vast sums to political parties for favors in a sort of schizophrenia of collective and individual morality.

"The English-Canadians didn't care who was running Quebec so long as their interests were protected," said Mr. Filion. "They were Quebecers only in the geographic sense."

Kicked Prop

Historian Michel Brunet maintains that the man who kicked away the first prop—this may startle some makers of the Quiet Revolution—was the late premier Maurice Duplessis, often termed the arch-apostle of conservatism.

"In 1954," said Dr. Brunet, "Duplessis brought in an income tax that struck directly at the upper brackets, the English-speaking powerful group. Nothing like that had happened before. Things could never be the same again. Today the French-Canadians are operating from a position of real majority power for the first time."

What's the Alternative For What's Knocked Down?

By ART STOTT

Bruce Hutchison spoke for me and, I believe, a very large number of other Canadians in his discussion on Page 4 Saturday of Peter Newman's book, The Distemper of Our Times. The book is excellently written, entertaining, charged with reader interest, sprinkled with humor and, to use the Hutchison term, fails to paint Mike Pearson warts and all—"only the warts are painted."

Stott

Mr. Newman appears dissatisfied with the way Mr. Pearson as Prime Minister quarterbacked the Liberal government. He is honest enough to list the statistics of the game in brief compass. They show impressive yardage and several touchdowns. Mr. Newman devotes his major efforts to the fumbles—and there were plenty of them.

When you've finished reading, you're left wondering how Mike managed to get the ball over the goal line so often when his blockers let the opposition blitz him time and again, and when his backs, with their arms cut off at the wrists, tried to run on broken legs.

Nevertheless, I think Peter Newman's book is an excellent example of the distemper of our times. It reflects for me the idealist who, having looked for a Moses to lead the people to the promised land, finds his choice less than perfect and reacts to his own disappointment. So many of us build our hopes so high we suffer unduly when they crash down and our resentment is correspondingly intensified.

This is a problem facing Mr. Pearson's successor. What takes the place of the Cloud Nine happiness which enveloped so much of Canada at the time of his selection as leader when the Cloud Niners find, as Mr. Trudeau has consistently assured them, that he cannot walk on the water without skis? Does it turn, like some good new wine, to vinegar?

The bitterly disenchanted idealist is one element, it seems to me, in the distemper of our times. There is another, and to me, more distressing—the ascendency of nihilism.

I believe that the old and worthless has to be knocked down to make way for what is valuable among the new. But knocking down is not enough. When the useless obstructions have been demolished, something better is required to take their place.

In our present stage of development, we seem to be doing an effective job of knocking down. It's the "in" thing to do. Furthermore, a competent knocker-downer can turn a quick buck from the operation. Unfortunately, in the philosophy held by some of the people of our times, the old inevitably must be battered down, whether it is good, bad or merely antique without being objectionable. The new is automatically good because it's new, even though it may be untried.

There's something to be said for the new and untried. It may be good, given a trial. For those who offer it as a substitute for the useless old, some encouragement is due. As I see it, the same cannot be said merely for destruction with no proposed replacement.

★ ★ ★

When I was a much younger man in this business, public attitudes slanted the other way. The slogan was "Boost, Don't Knock" and it took the Menckens and their like to pound some balance into the popular philosophy of that era. Human nature, with its various weaknesses, derived a gloating satisfaction from the unstuffing of some shirts, from the destruction of some phoney idols. Inevitably the swing tended to excess. Those with a potential for knocking down followed the old theory of giving a dog a bad name and kicking him. They rallied the public with the cries: "There's a stuffed shirt. Let's go to work. There's a phoney, let's topple it."

If you think the trend has ended, look around you. There are still the pompous and still the insincere. Sometimes though, I find it difficult to determine if there are more of each in the ranks of the attackers than in the ranks of the victims. And I'm quite sure that some people are victimized who stand head and shoulders above those who try to pull them down. Is a student activist leader automatically a better person than the president of the university he fights? Is the armchair quarterback automatically smarter than the player he criticizes on the televised game? Is the public figure who has attained office by working for the votes of the people inevitably less competent than the person who has never run for office but makes free with advice?

Next door to us at this office, the wreckers are pulling down the old North Ward School — and so they should. It had served its purpose, was obsolete and presumably unsafe. But it is coming down after a better building has been constructed a couple of blocks away. This makes pretty good sense.

It doesn't make very good sense to me to knock down all the schools in the district, metaphorically or physically, merely because they have been standing for a number of years. And I think the same applies to a large number of the figures in our current public life.

Severe Penalties For Top Broker

By RICHARD HALLORAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Securities and Exchange Commission imposed severe penalties on the nation's largest invest[illegible] violating anti-fraud provisions of the securities laws.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith consented to an SEC finding that it had used advance "inside" information from Douglas Aircraft Co. to benefit preferred institutional clients and to defraud the investing public.

The SEC ordered the New York firm to close its New York institutional sales office for 21 days, beginning Dec. 5, and its west coast underwriting office for 15 days, beginning Dec. 15. The commission also penalized five Merrill Lynch vice-presidents and five salesmen but dropped charges against four senior executives.

SEC sources estimated that public investors lost $4.5 million as a result of Merrill Lynch's action. The penalties are the most severe the SEC has assessed for misuse of inside information.

●

The findings against Merrill Lynch are a result of SEC's campaign to insure that the 24 million American investors have equal access to pertinent information that may affect their investment decisions.

The SEC is also taking action against the 12 recipients of Merrill Lynch's information, including Dreyfus Corp., Burden Investors Services, Madison Fund, and Investors Management Co. At a preliminary SEC hearing in New York Tuesday, the commission laid out specific charges of improper use of information to take unfair advantage of other investors.

Among the penalized Merrill Lynch executives hardest hit was vice president Archangelo Catapano, who was suspended from the firm without pay for 60 days.

The SEC's finding noted that Merrill Lynch consented "solely for the purpose of these proceedings and without admitting the allegations." This means the SEC finding may not be used as court evidence if an investor who considers himself defrauded files a civil suit or damages against Merrill Lynch.

According to the SEC, the Merrill Lynch case began June 7, 1966, when Douglas Aircraft filed with SEC a registration statement of a proposal to offer $75 million worth of debentures. Merrill Lynch was named as underwriter. The statement noted that Douglas had earned 85 cents per share during the five months ending April 30 of that year.

Between June 17 and 22, however, Merrill Lynch underwriters learned that Douglas earnings for the six months ending May 31 would be only 12 cents per share and that Douglas expected to show little or no profit for the year.

This information, the SEC said, was passed on between June 20 and 23 to selected clients, who sold a combined total of more than 190,000 shares before the Douglas information became public.

Moreover, Merrill Lynch continued, according to the commission, to advise other customers to buy Douglas stock without telling them about Douglas deteriorating prospects.

N. S. Project Will Issue Public Stock

A new common stock issue expected to receive most attention in the Maritimes is based on a concept pioneered in Victoria.

The issue to appear soon through Royal Securities and Richardson Securites is from Halifax Developments Ltd., which is building Scotia Square in the heart of old Halifax.

What it will do to rehabilitate the historic Atlantic port will be what Centennial Square did for downtown Victoria, but on a far grander scale.

It is expected the bulk of the stock distribution will be to the Maritimes, with little, if any left for the rest of Canada, even though a preliminary prospectus has been filed as far west as B.C.

Money raised will go toward the $24.7 million estimated cost of phases one to three in what could be a 10-phase project. A successful debenture issue and private financing have already been used for development capital.

19-ACRE SITE

This so far has covered land acquisition and clearing on a 19-acre site where the first building, the Trade Mart, is up and producing revenue from such tenants as CNR, a bank, exhibit halls, government offices and a warehouse.

Next year a retail area, theatre, offices and parking will be provided in phase two, and pedestrian malls and 12-storey Duke office tower will be built in phase three.

Under terms of Maritme development assistance programs, the city of Halifax, federal government and province of Nova Scotia are co-operating in the overall project.

EXPRESSWAY

It will be linked with a new express highway to the nearby city of Dartmouth.

Among those associated with the project and included with the original holders of 42 per cent of the equity in Halifax Developments are president Charles E. MacCulloch, chairman John C. MacKeen, the chairman of Nova Scotia Light and Power; vice-president Leonard A. Kitz, and director Russell Harrington.

Stages for to nine will cost an estimated $15 million and are scheduled through 1971.

They will include apartment towers, a 10-storey, 280-room hotel with convention facilities for 1,000 delegates, and a Barrington Street office tower rising 16 storeys.

Royal Bank

The Royal Bank of Canada reported Tuesday in its annual statement for the year ended Oct. 31 that net profits, after appropriation for losses and provision for income taxes, were $35.32 millon.

This was an increase of about $5 millon or 16.7 per cent, over the amount earned during the 1967 fiscal year. Per-share earnings in 1968 were $1.06 compared with 91 cents in 1967.

Total revenue for the year rose 26.1 per cent to $528 million. Totel expenses rose 21.8 per cent to $425.84 millon.

Canada Has Captive

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's easy to find trade for Canada in U.S. markets but hard to find Canadian producers to supply them, Robert M. Dawson, Canadian consul and trade commissioner in San Francisco, said Tuesday.

"Canadian companies just haven't looked," he said in an interview while in Vancouver conferring with B.C. firms. "They just haven't trained people to seek out leads."

He said the U.S. market is so vast that Canadian companies should not worry about competition because there is a place for almost every kind of product.

Bus Service Changes Hands

Three buses and five drivers will move over to Vancouver Island Coach Lines Ltd. from C and C Transportation Ltd. effective Jan. 15 in a transaction culminated Tuesday.

Ken Nordal, of C and C, said the sale for a "private sum" divests C and C of its Victoria airport limousine, sightseeing and charter limousine services, retaining for the firm its taxi operation, air express and mail carrying contracts.

Approval of government authorities such as the transport department of Public Utilities Commission is required.

Finance In Brief

Neon Products

Neon Products of Canada said in an interim report mailed to shareholders Tuesday it has acquired a sporting goods company and is looking for other acquisitions in the leisure field.

The acquisition of Universport Inc., which distributes domestic and imported sporting goods in Quebec, was made by the Neon subsidiary Imbrex.

Universport sales were close to $1 million last year. Sales volume of Neon and subsidiaries now is at the rate of $110 million a year.

Lumber Shipments

The Pacific Lumber Inspection Bureau Tuesday reported waterborne lumber shipments from British Columbia totalled 216.19 million board feet in October, compared with 168.88 million in October, 1967.

Stelco Output

Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. today produced its 4 millionth ton of steel this year, the first Canadian company to reach that mark.

President H. M. Griffith tapped the furnace of molten steel which gave Stelco its record.

Total Canadian steel production this year is expected to be about 10.8 million tons, compared with 9.5 million tons in 1967.

Crone Moving

Crone Moving and Storage Ltd., a pioneer Vancouver business, has been sold to Robertson Moving and Storage of Calgary and Edmonton, president Fred M. Crone said Tuesday.

Amount involved in the sale was not released.

Robertson Moving is owned by Trimac Services Co. Ltd. of Calgary, a large bulk materials moving company.

Bank of N.S.

The Bank of Nova Scotia had net earnings of $15.53 million or $1.04 a share for the year ended Oct. 31, compared with $12.9 million or 86 cents a share the previous year.

This was an increase of 20 per cent.

The bank says its total assets reached a record high of $5.2 billion, 26 per cent higher than the $4.13 billion of a year earlier.

Total revenue was $325.28 million, up 31 per cent.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Learn Now to Earn Later

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.
(This is a service provided by The Times and the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia).

In almost every field of endeavour the conditions and technology are continually changing. Therefore, continuing education is essential for everyone who wants to keep pace.

Too often trained people practice their trade or profession, and preach education — for children.

●

Most of the business and occupational associations do recognize their responsibility and provide some form of continuing education for their members. But the number of those members who take the courses is usually extremely small.

There are two possible causes for such a lack of participation. It could be that the content of the courses or the teaching methods are inadequate, or that the majority of the members are so under-educated as to believe they have nothing more to learn.

In eigher situation it is the members' responsibility to change. If the association executive is weak then the members have the obligation to the public they serve, and to themselves, to elect competent people to act as their leaders. It then becomes the responsibility of the executive to arouse the lethargic members out of their smug innocence.

●

The association of the trades and professions which require a high degree of technical training have fully recognized the problem. Some of them even require their members to attend educatoinal courses in order to maintain good standmg in the association.

It is more often the less complex trades where the tradesman, having learned his basic skill 20 years ago or more, is not even aware of the new methods which have been developed. Or, if he does notice the changes, dismiss them as new-fangled notions and tries to prevent their use to protect his own incompetence.

●

A man who makes his skill for hire has the responsibility to ensure that he offers the best of his capability. Progressive employers encourage and some even pay for courses for their employees. It is enlightened self-interest because a more skilled person can produce better and earn more for himself and for the employer.

It is not a reasonable excuse, however, for a man to complain that "they" do not do anything to help. If "they" do nothing "we" should be even more eager to organize something, but this means spending time and effort to get the organization rolling. Someone has to do the work and it cannot always be the other fellow, if a man is responsible for himself he must act responsibly.

It may be a cliche to reiterate that it is never too late to learn but in the modern world of rapidly accelerating change it is already far too late to stop learning. And to keep pace with the continually expanding demands it is essential to learn now to earn later.

SHELL STARTS No. 11

Shell Canada Ltd. is starting its 11th offshore petroleum probe on the west coast with a well named Apollo J-4, about 20 miles west of Estevan Point.

It is the second exploratory well to be drilled off Vancouver Island since the ocean drilling rig SEDCO 135-F returned from the Queen Charlotte Islands where it sank nine wells in Hecate Strait this year.

Well No. 10, Shell Anglo Harlequin D-86, was drilled off Estevan Point and plugged at a depth of 10,633 feet. The latest locations are some 25 miles northwest of the first four wells drilled by Shell in the Wickaninnish Bay area starting in the early summer of 1967.

'NOT INEXHAUSTIBLE'

Conservation Plea Was Left Unsaid

By PETE LOUDON

Governor-General Michener Tuesday praised British Columbia for her development of raw resources and ability to lure investors.

And also to point out that such resources are not inexhaustible and to recommend conservation.

But when he spoke to a state luncheon at the Empress Hotel, in the presence of Premier Bennett, his cabinet ministers and invited guests representing municipalities, business and the academic community, he dropped the warning from his address.

It remained, however, in the printed copies circulated to reporters.

Perhaps significantly, the speech followed by a few hours a statement from Premier Bennett that he intended to press Ottawa for permission to extend B.C.'s borders to encompass the resources-rich Yukon and part of the Northwest Territories.

The speech also may have been prepared for delivery before the disastrous landslide Sunday of loosened wastes from a Kaiser Coal Corp. strip mining operation at Natal. The slide, which took two lives, focussed public attention on the 16 major strip mining and open pit operations in the province.

Laid Waste

Attention had been sharpened in recent days by a CBC television presentation showing the vast areas of the United States laid waste by strip mining.

The combination of circumstances had led reporters to ask the premier whether controls would be set up to protect B.C. landscapes from similar desecration. The premier indicated it would not be necessary for such operations to recover finished pits with topsoil.

Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan, however, told reporters his department had studied the denuded areas of the U.S. and he hoped for a program of control, although it might be difficult to make such controls retroactive.

Only two hours before the governor-general's address the NDP asked for a legislative inquiry into the entire question of open pit mining.

Whether this potential hornet's nest resulted in the governor-general curbing his remarks is subject for speculation. This is what his speech said, but he did not say:

"We should remember that natural resources serve us in two significantly different ways.

"On the one hand they provide the raw materials for industry, but, equally important, they are the environment in which we live, and some of them are not inexhaustible.

"The growth of population and urbanization here and in the United States, and in fact in the whole world, gives our land, water, forests and wildlife new value and attraction for the people of a crowded world in which there will be very little unspoiled land.

"It behooves us not to waste or pollute it if we are to preserve these riches for ourselves and for future generations . . ."

Work Together

The speech went on to say that Canada wants more than simple conservation and it needs the co-ordinated development of all resources to serve "the demanding and often conflicting requirements of both rural and urban communities."

The speech suggested the solution depended upon three levels of government working closely together with industry and the private citizen.

In the portion of the address which was read by the governor-general, he compared modern methods of travel with those in 1885 when another vice-regal representative, the Marquis of Lansdowne, had to travel 42 miles on horseback covering a gap in the railway then under construction.

He quoted an 1886 publication for settlers extolling the climate and productive capacity of B.C. This led him to the productive capacity of today, the developing importance to the Pacific community and the interest shown here by other countries.

He said, "Investors both foreign and Canadian are lured by the resources of an immensely rich province.

"And there are few resources with which you are not most liberally endowed: forests, metals . . . coal, oil, fish, agriculture and hydro-electric power . . .

"All of these are done up in such an attractive package that tourism, is, I understand, becoming the most productive industry.

Resources

"These resources are being exploited with increasing efficiency. The growing volume of cargo through the port of Vancouver, and plans for the superport at Roberts Bank, testify to this."

Then Gov.-Gen. Michener repeated earlier remarks regretting he was unable to see the Peace River development at this time.

He said his wife and he are already planning another trip from the south coast to the Peace River and the Arctic.

In London, while travelling to Canada from India to take up his appointment in 1967, the governor-general said he planned two cross-Canada trips each year.

Premier Bennett presented the Micheners with a hand-carved Thunderbird totem pole as a memento from the province.

Before the Magistrate

A man sentenced last week for theft and assault was given an additional term Tuesday of seven to 12 months in the Young Offenders Unit.

Court was told Gordon Charles, 7 Cooper Road, was convicted in January of breaking and entering, given a two-year suspended sentence and placed on a $500 good behavior bond.

Tuesday he was charged with a breach of the bond resulting from the two recent convictions. Prosecutor Cory Stolte said he had also been convicted of impaired driving and theft over $50 this year.

An 18-year-old newcomer to the city pleaded guilty to taking two tape recorders from the Bay Nov. 12.

Frederick Hosli, who said he'd come from Prince Rupert, was remanded to Dec. 3 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

Court was told he and a 17-year-old juvenile took the articles, worth $22.95 each, and kept them for a week. Later they threw them into the water off the Johnson Street bridge.

Police said he admitted being involved in shoplifting in the city during the two weeks he had been here.

Fined $300 and $350 for impaired driving were Edward Auclair, 77 Cook, and Frederick Curnew, 27 San Jose.

Court was told Auclair was involved in an accident on St. Charles Street Nov. 3 and Curnew collided with the Johnson Street bridge the same day.

AMONG HIS SOUVENIRS of his years as B.C.'s lieutenant-governor, Gen. G. R. Pearkes treasures a wood carving humorously depicting a vice-regal entourage. Mrs. Michener, wife of the governor-general, listened attentively and presented Gen. and Mrs. Pearkes with another memento —a gift of plants from Rideau Hall. The vice-regal couple made a tea-time visit to the Pearkes home on Tattersall Drive.

SENATE TO ESTABLISH POVERTY COMMITTEE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate approved a motion Tuesday that it set up a special committee "to investigate and report on all aspects of poverty in Canada."

Senator David A. Croll (L.—Ontario), who proposed the motion, said that "we have to face up to the grim and hideous fact that one out of every five Canadians lives in poverty."

The 17-member Senate committee would examine Canada's present social legislation in action.

Hydro Bond Issue Totals $10 Million

A cabinet order Tuesday gave provincial guarantee to interest and principle of a new $10,000,000 issue of Britih Columbia Hydro and Power Authority bonds.

The issue, limited to a yield of 7 3-10 per cent, payable half yearly, will be known as British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority sinking fund bonds series Z, and will be available initially as fully registered but exchangeable for coupon bonds.

The exact interest date other than the yield limitation was not specified. They are simply "to be issued from time to time in such respective amounts, bearing such respective dates, all as the minister of finance of the province of British Columbia as fiscal agent of the Authority may from time to time decide."

They will be redeemable on 30-days' public notice.

Canada's Defence Budget Ranks Sixth Among NATO Alliance Nations

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—The standard American army rifle in 1946 cost $31. Its modern equivalent costs $150.

That five-fold increase in buying today's simple bread-and-butter military equipment holds generally true through the vastly more complicated and expensive items in modern arsenals.

It helps explain, officials say here, the protracted nature of Canada's review of military commitments for NATO, for North American defence and elsewhere—as reconciled with other priorities.

Canada has become only a moderate military spender. The Institute of Strategic Studies in London, for example, rates the over-all Canadian defence budget sixth among the 15-country NATO alliance and Canada 12th in the slice of its gross national product allocated to defence.

It says nine other NATO countries maintain larger defence establishments.

But the simple maintenance of that status with new weapons to replace those now nearing their useful life will cost Canada tens of millions of dollars for aircraft alone at today's steadily-rising prices.

NEWER VOODOS NEEDED

Three squadrons of Voodoo interceptor aircraft, acquired off the shelf from the U.S. for North American air defence purposes, will be obsolete in 1973. They could be "stretched out" by swaps for some slightly-newer American Voodoos. The U.S. price tag for each plane was $1,800,000.

Canada has six squadrons of CF-104 Starfighters with NATO, manufactured in Canada and also due to be retired in 1973. That price was about $2,000,000 a plane.

The Canadian defence department, mindful perhaps of the ill-fated Avro Arrow abandoned in 1959, recently decided against entering a consortium with European allies to build an all-purpose fighter-interceptor aircraft.

Defence Minister Cadieux said 250 planes might have cost Canada as much as $2,000,000,000 over seven to eight years.

The alternative is to buy another off-the-shelf aircraft from the U.S., or some other supplier, unless the defence review leads to some other solution.

Canada also has 11 Canada-built Yukon and 24 Hercules transport aircraft to replace, not to mention the Canada-built Argus used for anti-submarine work.

CONSIDER GIANT CRAFT

Some consideration has been given to the world's largest aircraft being built in the U.S., the C-5A, designed to carry about 700 troops each, or tanks or helicopters.

The U.S. defence department has just announced that the estimated price for each plane has gone up by $10,000,000—to about $35,000,000. It could be higher if labor and material costs, and technical bugs, continue their impact.

A strictly Canadian example of inflation is the four helicopter-carrying destroyers first planned in 1966 and perhaps earmarked for NATO use as Canada's contribution to the NATO response to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The original cost estimate for all four was about $160,000,000 and it now exceeds $220,000,000.

A lengthy list of then-and-now arms prices was read into one congressional record in October, based on official U.S. list prices, as a warning not to expect any reduction in military spending in the future.

The old B-17 of Second World War fame cost $218,000 and the controversial F-111 fighter-bomber costs $7,000,000. The F-86 Sabre jet fighter used in Korea cost a little less than $300,000—Canada built about 1,800 at an average cost of $355,000—and the F-4 Phantom, the best U.S. plane in Vietnam, costs $2,100,000.

A Second World War submarine came at $4,700,000 and a modern nuclear attack sub costs $77,000,000. The battleship New Jersey cost $100,000,000 to build between 1940 and 1943. To get it out of mothballs, for a belated appearance off Vietnam recently, cost $20,000,000.

An 81-millimetre mortar cost $669 in 1946 and costs $2,430 this year.

Even the cost of a cot—canvas, folding—is up. It cost $6.90 eight years ago and now it costs $15.

Kennett's Style Makes Cats Purr

'NOT AIR TRAVELLER,' GUMP RETURNS HOME

MONTREAL (CP) — Netminder Gump Worsley of Montreal Canadiens left the team in Chicago Tuesday and was to return to Montreal by train after a rough airplane flight to Chicago earlier in the day.

The Canadiens were on their way to a game in Los Angeles.

Sam Pollock, vice-presient and general manager of the club, said Worsley probably would meet with him Thursday morning.

"Worsley is a nervous individual," Pollock said. "He's not a good air traveller."

The Canadiens stopped off in Chicago after a rough flight to transfer to another airplane for Los Angeles where the Canadiens are scheduled to meet the Kings tonight.

"When the team landed in Chicago, he told the coach (Claude Ruel) that his nerves had go the best of him," said Pollock.

Defensive Stand Carries Cougars To 8-1 Triumph

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars dropped New Westminster Royals 8-1 Tuesday and fattened their individual B.C. Junior Hockey League scoring totals by sharing a 21-point feast.

Defenceman Murray Kennett managed only a single assist but came around to Memorial Arena to put substance into a theory that big eaters aren't necessarily the healthiest ones.

Despite his one-assist diet, Kennett happened to be one of the best players on the ice as the Cougars took over sole possession of third place and crept to within one point of the second rung in the six-team league.

Murray was flawless on defence and sparked numerous offensive thrusts with his well-timed rushing.

IMPRESSES SCOUTS

Only 16, Kennett is eligible to play in midget ranks this season. It's no wonder, then, that he has been catching eyes of experienced hockey figures.

In recent days, there has been a steady stream of hockey scouts. Among them, Lou Passadore (New York Rangers), former Victoria Maple Leaf coach Frank Mario (now talent-hunting for St. Louis Blues) and Cecil "Tiny" Thompson (Chicago Black Hawks). All "liked" Kennett.

So did the majority in an audience of 1,689 fans Tuesday.

One assist out of 21 points is not abundant, and it may seem strange to single out Kennett. But that's how it was in a "strange" game.

SPOTTY AND SPURTY

Though Cougars won by a seven-goal margin, they didn't play that well for the entire 60 minutes. And although they gave up one goal, the Victoria juniors managed to come up with many erratic efforts in their own zone.

Fortunately for the Cougars, the Royals fared worse. The Royals simply couldn't capitalize on their best scoring chances.

A rash of penalties did much to upset Victoria's balance in the first period, but the Cats managed to come up with a 2-0 lead. They needed half of the second period to recover before coming on to play their best hockey in the third, out-scoring Westminister 4-0.

SHUTOUT SPOILED

Adrian Blais and Bruce Cowick each scored two goals, and both were unfortunate in not adding a third. Len Barrie, Dave Williams, Bob Merluk and Graham Brown added singles while Mick Wilson wrecked Ron Grahame's shutout hopes by banging in the Royal goal early in the second period.

Cougar centre Grant Evans, playing with a touch of the 'flu, managed three assists while rookie Lonnie Miles picked up a pair.

Grahame was a steady performer, blocking 38 shots. Westminster's Lionel L'Heureux stopped 31 of the 39 sent his way.

Cougars took seven of the 13 penalties handed out by referee Bunker Hill. Six of the seven came in the opening period and all but one seemed warranted.

GALLANT STAND

Hill thumbed off three of the Cougars within an 84-second span late in the period. Cougars played short-handed two men for two minutes and 38 seconds, but managed to hold off the Royals with some outstanding defensive work.

So effective were the Cougar defenders that Grahame had to come up with only two good saves in that stretch.

Now it's road time. Cougars, hoping to rebound into second, move away this weekend for their second visit to Okanagan centres. The Cats open in Vernon on Friday, tackle the leading Broncos in Penticton Saturday and wind up the tour Sunday in Kamloops.

BARRIE STARTS IT OFF

Sprawling netminder Lionel L'Heureux is surrounded by Cougars in first-period action around New Westminster goal. Ganging tactics paid off as backhander by Len Barrie (10) opened scoring and helped Victoria to 8-1 B.C. Junior Hockey League victory at Memorial Arena Tuesday. VOTE OF CONFIDENCE FOR ALOUETTE COACH

TORONTO (CP)—The owner of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference has given his coach, Kaye Dalton, a vote of confidence.

Joe Atwell, emerging from a closed-door meeting of Canadian Football League general managers here Tuesday, said he is hopeful his last-place Alouettes will be in the Grey Cup next year when it will be played in Montreal.

"I'd think we'd be up there. We need help in the offensive line and a good tight end. As for quarterback Carroll Williams, I'm more than happy with his performance.

"And Kaye has done a good job."

Atwell predicted that Ottawa Rough Riders would defeat Calgary Stampeders in Saturday's Grey Cup.

Canuck Golf Body Supports USPGA

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Professional Golfers' Association Tuesday decided to support the Professional Golfers' Association of the United States in its dispute with the new Association of Professional Golfers about control of the pro tour.

The executive of the CPGA declared the support after listening to a full report of the controversy from its president, Bill Richardson.

Richardson, back from Florida where he attended the U.S. PGA meeting recently, said the CPGA would take no action against members who play on the APG tour.

Canadians expected to play on this tour include Al Balding, George Knudson, Gary Bowerman, Alvie Thompson and Bob Panasiuk of Ontario, Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, Bill Wakeham of Victoria, Bob Cox and Wayne Vollmer, both of Vancouver.

ALSO PLANS NO ACTION

"There have been a lot of statements from the U.S. players, most of them very emotional, but the PGA of America is taking no action against players at this time," Richardson said.

"They are still members of the PGA. There is a slight chance the PGA will come up with a settlement.

"The players control the tour about 98 per cent right now. The PGA has no intention of giving up its two per cent."

CONTROL RECLAIMED

The CPGA decision follows one in which the Royal Canadian Golf Association spurned a contract with the APG and decided to reclaim control of the Canadian Open.

The PGA of America put the Canadian Open on its tour schedule. However, the APG has scheduled a $150,000 tournament in Philadelphia on the same weekend as the $125,000 Canadian Open at Montreal.

Cetlic Advances In Soccer Series

BELGRADE (AP) — Celtic of Glasgow and Crvena Zvezda of Belgrade drew 1-1 today in the return match of second-round European Cup soccer competition, but the Scottish team qualified for the quarer-finals on goal aggregate. Celtic had won the first leg 5-1 in Glasgow.

TOURIST RETURNING

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—Former major leaguer Dick Stuart, who has played baseball in Japan the past two seasons, plans to report to California Angels as a free agent next spring in an effort to win a berth with the American League team.

Luzzi Majors In Line Science

CALGARY (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have some fast backs but Don Luzzi isn't going to be watching them in the Grey Cup game at Toronto Saturday.

"If you do you'll find yourself sitting on your backside," said the defensive tackle for Calgary Stampeders.

With 13 years of football experience, Luzzi has learned to cope with a variety of offensive manoeuvres.

"A few years ago you could be set in a four or five-man line for three quarters of a ball game. But the game has become so scientific now that if you stay in one defence more than a couple of series they'll pick you apart."

Calgary quarterback Peter Liske is one of the most talented in this regard, Luzzi said.

WILL MOVE AROUND

Luzzi, Canada's most outstanding lineman in 1958, will be moving from side to side in Toronto as the Stampeders continually change defensive styles.

The objective will be to force the opposition to change plays at the line of scrimmage, thus creating possible confusion among backs whose patterns have been switched.

You watch the line motion, Luzzi said, with any movement creating a reflex action.

Ottawa will probably counter with several tricks. For instance, some centres will lift the ball slightly just before the snap. Defensive linemen, accustomed to responding immediately to motion, may be pulled offside.

Then there's the exceptional faking of Rider quarterback Russ Jackson that "can fool the heck out of a defence," said Luzzi, an all-star on eight occasions.

BLOCKING TIPS PLAY

Luzzi said the defensive line often reads an offensive play through the blocking.

"If the block is from my inside, that usually means the play is going to the inside . . . but there are variations. The offence could leave you guessing with a fake draw, or pull a guard one way and run the play the other way."

The Stampeders have a special play they use to block punts. It worked against Saskatchewan Roughriders in the 25-12 victory that put Calgary into the Grey Cup game for the first time in 19 years last Wednesday night.

One side of the line is overloaded and certain opposing personnel are picked off in a bid to clear a path for a potential blocker.

McGrandle Quits at 21

EDMONTON (CP)—Billy McGrandle, former Canadian featherweight boxing champion, has announced his retirement from the ring at 21.

Winner of 13 of his 15 professional fights, McGrandle won the featherweight title in 1966, shortly after turning pro, and was stripped of it by the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation last summer when he did not report for a physical examination after declining to appear for a fight in Regina.

McGrandle said today his decision to quit was largely due to a stomach ulcer, discovered shortly after he was stopped in the 12th round by Johnny Famechon in Melbourne, Australia, last summer.

Riders Place Eight

TORONTO (CP)—When Ottawa Rough Riders take the field Saturday for the Grey Cup game against Calgary Stampeders, they will have eight all-stars working for them.

The Football Reporters of Canada named eight Ottawa players, including quarterback Russ Jackson, to the Eastern Football Conference all-star team announced Tuesday by FRC president Ted Reynolds of Vancouver.

Toronto Argonauts, who also had eight players named to the team, lost the two-game, total-point EFC playoff final to Ottawa 47-27.

There were five Hamilton Tiger-Cats and four Montreal Alouettes named to the team although the only player to crack Ottawa's complete domination of the all-star offensive backfield was halfback Bill Symons of Toronto.

JACKSON UNANIMOUS

In the backfield with Jackson, back for a third straight year as a unanimous choice, are halfback Vic Washington, fullback Bo Scott and flanker Whit Tucker, all of Ottawa.

Symons this year became the first player in Toronto history to gain more than 1,000 yards in a single season.

He picked up 1,107 yards in 164 carries and scored nine touchdowns as well as taking 44 passes for 536 yards and two touchdowns to help Toronto to its second-place conference finish behind Ottawa.

Hamilton wound up third and lost the sudden-death semi-final playoff to Toronto while Montreal finished the season fourth.

The team:

OFFENCE

Quarterback—Russ Jackson, Ottawa.
Running back—Bill Symons, Toronto; Vic Washington and Bo Scott, Ottawa.
Flanker—Whit Tucker, Montreal.
Centre—Basil Bark, Montreal.
Guards—Bill Danychuk, Hamilton; Charlie Parker, Montreal.
Tackles—Bill Frank, Toronto; Ellison Kelly, Hamilton.
Ends—Tommy-Joe Coffey, Hamilton; Mel Profit, Toronto.

DEFENCE

Ends—Billy Ray Locklin, Hamilton; Ed Harrington, Toronto.
Tackles—Mike Wadsworth, Toronto; Marshall Shirk, Ottawa.
Linebackers—Ken Lehman, Ottawa; Allan Ray Aldridge, Toronto; Jerry Campbell, Ottawa.
Backs—Garney Henley, Hamilton; Ed Learn and Marv Luster, Toronto; Larry Fairholm, Montreal; Don Sutherin, Ottawa.

QUINN GOES UP

Leafs' Defence Stock Depleted

By The Canadian Press

It's just possible that Toronto Maple Leafs may run out of defencemen before the National Hockey League season is finished.

Four are injured now, and the team has played only 18 games of a rugged 76-game schedule. The latest casualty is veteran Marcel Pronovost, hurt during Toronto's 7-4 loss to Boston Bruins Sunday.

Others incapacitated by injury are Pierre Pilote and rookies Rickie Ley and Brian Glennie. To replace Pronovost, the Maple Leafs have recalled aggressive Pat Quinn from Tulsa of the Central Hockey League.

When Toronto takes the ice against the Penguins at Pittsburgh tonight, Tim Horton will be the only experienced Maple Leaf rearguard. He will be joined by four youngsters—Quinn, Jim McKenny, Mike Pelyk and Jim Dorey.

In other activity tonight, Montreal Canadiens visit Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Black Hawks are at New York Rangers, Boston Bruins journey to St. Louis to play the Blues, Philadelphia Flyers welcome Detroit Red Wings and Oakland Seals meet Minnesota North Stars at Minneapolis.

INJURED SUNDAY

Pronovost strained ligaments in his left knee during the second period of Sunday's game when Boston's Johnny McKenzie crashed into him. There was no immediate announcement about the length of his convalescence.

Pilote has missed six games because of a knee injury suffered Nov. 13 against Boston. But it is hoped he will be ready for weekend games.

Ley, out with a severe charley horse since Nov. 10, is expected to resume skating next week. Glennie suffered a separated shoulder on the second day of training camp at Peterborough Ont., last September and has been inactive ever since.

The latest replacement, Quinn, is six-foot-three and weighs 205 pounds. He is regarded as rugged but a poor skater.

The Maple Leafs also announced Monday that rookie goaltender Al Smith has been sent to Tulsa of the CHL, leaving the netminding chores to Bruce Gamble and Johnny Bower.

Rumors Monday had the Maple Leafs, Boston and Philadelphia trying to arrange a three-way trade. The Leafs would obtain a goaltender—either Bernie Parent or Doug Favell—and defenceman Joe Watson from Philadelphia for forwards Mike Walton and Wayne Carleton.

Then the Maple Leafs would send the goaltender and a forward to Boston for defenceman Ted Green and a forward. Toronto manager-coach Punch Imlach refused comment Monday on the trade rumors.

Cordova Bay Partners Win Marathon Battles

Cordova Bay shuttle-swatters Yvonne Grant and Ileane Bealle survived stamina-sapping struggles Tuesday night at Brentwood Community Hall to reach the semi-finals of handicap women's doubles competition in the annual Saanich open badminton championships.

In marathon matches, the distaff duo downed Fran Pugh and Leslie Sluggett from Brentwood 12-15, 15-5, 15-5 in the first round and then edged Winnie Price and Ethel Sandhues from Belmont 12-15, 15-7, 15-5 for the berth in the semis.

DIXON ADVANCES

In men's "B" singles competition, second-seeded Keith Dixon of Cordova Bay defeated Martin Woods, president of the Brentwood club, 5-15, 15-8, 15-12, while veteran Jim Wells of the Victoria Racquet Club downed Murray Foubister of Cordova Bay in straight games — 15-5, 15-5.

Tonight's play features first rounds events in the open mixed doubles and continuation of play in handicap events.

Tonight's draw:

7:30 p.m.—Paul Scheske and Frank Brix vs winners of Woods and Faulkner vs B. Powell and B. Lewis; Vonnie Bryant and Pam Davies vs Pat Knott and Judy Sluggett; Jo and Phil Crampton vs winner of M. J. Smith and D. Griffith vs L. Smith and B. Powell.

8—Doris Friessen and Linda Smith vs Nan Paterson and Gwen Wharton; Phil Crampton and Richard Harris vs Kelly Troup and Dick McQuinn; Veral Park and Jim Wells vs Muriel Knott and George Lane.

8:30—Dennis Clemett and Gerry Mounce vs winner of 7:30 match; Ann Currie and Ed Hedley vs Virginia Guenther and Roger Lindal; Renee Palmgren and Bob Lewis vs Maureen and Eric Hibberson.

9—Geraldine Pugh and Dennis Clemett vs Doris Friessen and Dick McQuinn; Pat Knott and Stewart Armour vs winners of Patterson and Dixon vs S. Wood and R. Howe; Dan Lyle and Ross Woodland vs George Rawlins and Larry Booth.

9:30—Murray Foubister and Dave Griffith vs winner 8 p.m. match; Ross Payne and Cliff Wighiman vs R. Howe and R. St. Dennis; Handicap mixed doubles—winners vs winners.

10—Renee Palmgren and Bob Lewis vs winner 9 p.m. match; Penny McGaughey and Gordie Robinson vs Marilyn Sluggett and Ray St. Dennis; Eric Hibberson and George Lane vs Richard O'Neill and Dennis Clemett.

Late Goal by Lunde Thwarts Roadrunners

Many Fans Set Sights On Toronto

OTTAWA (CP) — All 4,000 Grey Cup tickets allotted to Ottawa have been snapped up, assuring the Rough Riders of a solid cheering section for Saturday's Grey Cup game against Calgary Stampeders.

The Riders, Eastern Football Conference champions, were to attend a city-organized pep rally today, two hours before they were to fly to Toronto.

Coach Frank Clair and his players will stay outside the city until game day. They'll work out at Etobicoke Thursday and Friday.

Air Canada has scheduled four additional flights from here to Toronto Friday to accommodate Toronto-bound fans and a bus company is adding 20 vehicles to handle the demand.

In addition, the CNR reported heavy bookings for its Friday trains going to Toronto.

EXPECT MORE PASSING

With Calgary halfback Dave Cranmer not expected to play, the Riders look for quarterback Peter Liske to throw even more than he has during the regular season.

Liske, playing his last Canadian game before taking a crack at U.S. ball, completed 271 of 438 passes during the season, 31 of them for touchdowns.

Ottawa defensive halfback Don Sutherin, who led EFC scorers, also thinks Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson's running ability will be a big plus for the Riders.

Sutherin, 31, expects a high-scoring game if the weather is good. Calgary was the highest-scoring WFC club this season with 412 points in 16 games; the Riders got 416 points in 14 games.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks Tuesday night picked up their third Western Hockey League win over Phoenix Roadrunners this season, a 3-2 decision through Len Lunde's goal late in the final period.

Canucks had twice been in the lead in a dull meeting before 5,489 spectators when Ted Snell tied the count at 2-2 for Phoenix at 9:10 of the third. Lunde scored with help from John Gofton at 18:33.

Veteran Andy Bathgate scored Canucks' first goal on a breakaway in the first period and Duke Harris counted the other, a little more than four minutes after Andre Pronovost's tying Phoenix marker.

Canucks climbed to the 23-point level in WHL standings, five behind Portland Buckaroos and seven behind San Diego Gulls. Seattle Totems have 19, Roadrunners 15 and Denver Spurs only seven in 21 games.

MILLAR SHARP

Canucks and Roadrunners both used second-string goaltenders Tuesday night, with Al Millar of Canucks making 22 saves and Ken Broderick looking after 24 shots in the Phoenix nets.

Roadrunners drew four of seven penalties, including a major to defenceman Tom Polanic in the second frame.

GREY CUP NOTES . . . . . COOL WEATHER IN OFFING

Don't Forget . . . Kickoff Is at 10 a.m.

A lot of football fans are still asking . . .

"When does Saturday's Grey Cup game start?"

The answer is: 10 a.m. Pacific Standard Time!

That's the scheduled kickoff time for the national classic which takes Ottawa Rough Riders and Calgary Stampeders to Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition stadium.

Both national television networks (CBC and CTV) will start their pre-game programs, including the Grey Cup parade, earlier in the morning.

But, again, game time is officially listed as 10 a.m. (or 1 p.m. Toronto time).

As always, the playing field again is cause for mid-week concern. Eastern Conference playoffs chewed up the field, particularly down the centre, but there is "no hope" of resodding.

Nor is there any chance of sprucing up the playing surface with green paint.

Paint was suggested, but vetoed by head groundskeeper Don McIntyre, who tried it out for a game a few years ago.

"It looked good at first, but . . . came off all over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats," McIntyre said. "Angelo Mosca wound up looking like the Jolly Green Giant."

The long-range forecast by The Toronto weather office predicts temperatures around 40 degrees, with cloudy skies Saturday. The chance of rain or snow on any late November day is better than 50-50, the forecasters say.

In the event of inclement weather, the decision to postpone the game will be made at 8 a.m. PST on the day of the contest. Fog made play impossible with fewer than 10 minutes remaining in the game of 1962. The final few minutes were played the following day.

The score will remain the same and the entire last-half of the game will be played the following day if a similar situation arises this year.

★ ★ ★

It's only two years since Ottawa made its last appearance in a Grey Cup game, but the eastern champions have made a lot of changes in that time.

Of the 32 Ottawa players who trotted on the Vancouver field in 1966 to lose to Saskatchewan Roughriders, only 15 are still in the lineup that Frank Clair will send out against Calgary.

Six of the holdovers go back to the Ottawa club which won the Grey Cup in 1960 by beating Edmonton Eskimos. They are tackles Jim Cain, 29, and Moe Racine, 31; centre Jerry Selinger, the oldest Rider at 34, defensive halfback Joe Poirier, 27, offensive halfback Ron Stewart, 33, and quarterback Russ Jackson, 31.

Others from the 1966 Rider club are defensive end Billy Joe Booth, 25, defensive halfback Gene Gaines, 29, middle linebacker Ken Lehmann, 24, offensive guard Roger Perdrix, 22, defensive tackle Marshall Shirk, 25, centre Doug Specht, 23, flanker Whit Tucker, 25, fullback Bo Scott, 23, and offensive end Jay Roberts, 23.

No Dissenters As O. J. Named On All Ballots

NEW YORK (UPI) — O. J. Simpson, who often makes the difficult look easy, accomplished the unprecedented Tuesday when he got the nation's sports writers and broadcasters to agree.

Simpson, the record-breaking running back from Southern California, was a unanimous choice on all 202 ballots cast in the voting for the 1968 United Press International all-American college football team.

Perhaps even greater tribute to O. J. also arrived Tuesday when he was announced winner of the Heisman Trophy as the best college football player in the U.S. by an overwhelming margin.

In gaining the award which he barely lost to Gary Seban last year, Simpson amassed 855 first-place votes and 2,853 points. A total of 1,042 sports writers and sportscasters voted in the balloting conducted by the Downtown Athletic Club.

Leroy Keyes of Purdue, also a running back, was runner-up with 1,103 points, and quarterback Terry Hanratty of Notre Dame was a distant third with 387.

Simpson's selection in the UPI poll marked the first time in the history of the team — the only All-America team chosen by direct vote of the nation's sports writers and broadcasters — that one man was named on all the ballots. In 1966 end George "Bubba" Smith of Michigan State missed a unanimous vote by seven ballots.

It also marked the second straight year that Simpson, now a senior, had led the voting for the all-America team and for the second year in a row Keyes, who received votes both on offense and defence, was runner-up with a total of 191 ballots.

But the Trojans, who had four men on the squad last year, landed only two this time — Simpson and defensive back Mike Battle.

Notre Dame, which will meet Southern Cal this Saturday in the final game of the regular season for each, took top team honors on the all-American team with three berths.

Totems, Dockers Record Easy Wins

Victoria High Totems romped to a 62-10 win over visiting Claremont Tuesday and stepped to the top of the Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League.

At University School, Esquimalt Dockers defeated hosts 51-42 to move into a tie for third place with Mt. Douglas Rams.

Gary Thurber and Dave Mulcahy each fired 12 points for Totems, who led by quarter scores of 14-4, 28-7, 48-8. Gerry Vanderjagt contributed 10 points to the victory while the bulk of Claremont's points were provided by Greg Russell (7).

Glen Lorimer paced the Esquimalt win with 16 points while Cec Ferguson added 12.

Tough Defence Shackles Labs

Defensive skill, often ignored in modern basketball, was back in the spotlight at Mount Douglas High School Tuesday night and Labatts found themselves back in a tie for first place in the Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League.

Farmer Construction was the club that pulled defensive determination out of the mothballs and the Farmers became the first team in the circuit this season to hold a rival to less than 50 points. They shackled Labatt snipers and carved out a 64-36 triumph over the pace-setting Labs.

In the second game of the night, Red Lion Inn turned Morris Douglas loose on a 29-point spree and whipped Colony Inn 76-68 to move into a first-place deadlock with Labatts.

Mike Gallo added 15 points for the Lions, who managed only a skimpy, three-point lead (40-37) at half time.

Ollie Goldsmith and Ed Steele each fired 14 points for Colony with clubmates Jim Cunningham (13) and Wayne Allen (12) close behind.

Pete Simmonds (24 points) was the big gun for Farmers, who also got a 13-point contribution from Rick Humber.

None of the Labs managed to crack the Farmer defence for double figures. Most effective of the losers were Ken Gregory and Bruce Clarke, each with eight points.

'Legal Tradition' In Boxing's Favor

OSLO (UPI) — The legal committee of the Nordic Council Tuesday narrowly decided—seven votes to six—not to ban professional boxing in the Scandinavian countries.

During the discussion, it was established that boxing was maltreatment of a fellow human being, dangerous and sometimes fatal. The legal experts stated that it is against the law in the Scandinavian countries to maltreat a person even if he is willing.

The committee decided, however, that there was no legal basis for a ban against professional boxing because the sport has been practised for so many years that the legal tradition for its continued existence had been created.

Now It's Linda's Turn

TORONTO (CP) — Linda Walters, usherette at Greenwood racetrack, announced she will seek a licence to ride as a jockey.

"Why not?" she asks. "Girls are attempting to ride at tracks in the United States."

Linda plans to start riding horses at Woodbine racetrack when training begins there in mid-February. She will be sponsored by trainer Paul Drouin.

Linda, who has exercised horses in morning workouts, had to give up riding temporarily last June when she broke both arms while schooling a quarter horse for an amateur all-girl race at a Toronto farm.

NOT THE FIRST

She expects to have similar problems to those faced by the two U.S. girls who have applied for licences—Penny Ann Early and Kathy Kusner. Ontario Racing Commission rules relating to jockeys begin with the words "any male."

"I've been riding horses for 10 years," she said.

Linda is five-foot-eight and weighs 118 pounds and admits she would have to lose "about 10 pounds" to make the weight.

"I can do it," she says.

An ORC spokesman was dubious.

"We would hesitate to license a woman," he said.

Pistol-Packer After Back Pay

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Former Houston football player Charles Lockhart was arrested Tuesday after he allegedly pulled a pistol on Oilers' general manager Don Klosterman in a dispute over money, police said.

Lockhart, 25, was charged with serious threat to take a life and carrying a pistol. Peace Justice Hugo A. Touchy set bond at $1600.

Klosterman, 38, who once played for Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, said the incident occurred in his American Football League office.

"There were no shots fired," he said.

Klosterman said Lockhart, a free agent, suffered a shoulder injury during training camp and was released after the injury had healed.

MONEY OWED?

Lockhart, a 6-foot, 180-pound split end, claimed he had not recovered sufficiently to play. Lockhart told police the club owed him $13,000.

Tom Williams, 40, a team scout, subdued Lockhart and grabbed the automatic pistol, Klosterman said.

National Football League rules state that if a player is injured while under contract to a club, he must be paid by that club until he is recovered. The Oilers contend that when Lockhart was waived from the team, he had recovered from his shoulder injury and simply was not good enough to make the team.

CFB Esquimalt Bows to Comox

CFB Comox wrested the Canadian Armed Forces Zone I soccer championship from CFB Esquimalt 3-0 in the final, played Tuesday on a muddy Colville Road pitch.

George Walker, Sam Casey and Jit Prasad scored the goals.

In a consolation game, Queen's Own Rifles downed Chilliwack 6-0 with Ray Bunner and Rick Charlton scoring two goals each.

Flu Bug Spreads In Vikings' Camp

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A flu virus spread through the Minnesota Vikings' football team Tuesday, with at least 15 players reported ill. Eleven players missed practice.

Coach Bud Grant said he did not know what effect the sickness will have for next Sunday's National Football League game against Los Angeles Rams.

Lawyers Cut Into Derby Earnings

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Peter Fuller's fight to erase the blot on the racing record of his famous colt already has cost him approximately $65,000 in legal fees.

That's more than half of the $122,600 winner's share of the 1968 Kentucky Derby—which Fuller doesn't have yet—and expenses are still climbing.

But the millionaire auto dealer from Boston is determined to discredit a report which claims an illegal medication was found in Dancer's Image after he romped home first in the Derby on May 4.

Fuller launched another attack Tuesday when an analytic chemist and a veterinarian were flown here to give their views on phenylbutazone and the tests which can be used to spot the drug in a horse's urine.

Dr. J. Gerald Umbreit spent most of the day before the Kentucky State Racing Commission, now hearing Fuller's appeal, and summarized his opinion this way:

'TESTS PROVE ABSENCE'

"The organization doesn't understand what it is doing. It (the tests) proves the absence of phenylbutazone. They clearly indicate the drug is not there."

Umbreit is a consultant for a Chadds Ford, Pa., laboratory.

Kenneth W. Smith, operator of a mobile chemistry lab at Churchill Downs, announced to the stewards on May 6 that he had found phenylbutazone in the horse's urine sample.

The stewards, in turn, barred Dancer's Image from sharing in the purse. The money, as well as the amount for the second, third and fourth horses, is being held in escrow until the case is settled.

Phenylbutazone is permitted in Kentucky as long as it cannot be discovered by the time a horse runs in a race.

The other witness for Fuller was Dr. Matthew McKay-Smith of Newark, Dec. The veterinarian said that he and Umbreit had been hired by Fuller shortly after the Derby to try to duplicate the tests performed by Smith.

Kathy Keeps Cash Crown On Golf Tour

CINCINNATI (AP) — Kathy Witworth has clinched, for the second straight year, the official money winnings title on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Her victory Sunday at Delray Beach, Fla., gave her $47,154 in official money winnings, LPGA headquarters announced Tuesday. It also enabled her to tie Carol Mann in the number of tournaments won in 1968.

They have won 10 each and Miss Mann is second in money winnings with $44,446 going into the final tournament of 1968 at Hollywood, Fla., next weekend.

The 10 leading money winners:

Kathy Whitworth, $47,154; Carol Mann, $44,446; Sandra Haynie, $25,992; Marilynn Smith, $20,057; Sandra Spuzich, $18,889; Clifford Ann Creed, $17,619; Mickey Wright, $17,147; Sandra Palmer, $16,470; Shirley Englehorn $15,579; Donna Caponi, $13,888.

Nats Select Tour Choices

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Jackie McLeod will take 20 players, 13 from Winnipeg and seven from Ottawa, to Moscow where Canada's national hockey team will play in an international tournament Dec. 1 to 7.

Those chosen from the Winnipeg-based club are goaltenders Wayne Stephenson and Dave Clelland; defencemen Terry O'Malley, Gary Begg, Don Smith and Steve Carlyle; and forwards Fran Huck, Jim Irving, George Watson, Ted Hargreaves, Gerry Pinder, Bob Birdsell and Bill Hindle.

From the Ottawa team are defencemen Ab Demarco and playing coach Jack Bownass; and forwards Terry Caffery, Ritchie Bayes, Rod Zaine, Derek Holmes and Jean Cusson.

Rugby Campaign Gets Under Way

Mount Douglas Mountainmen opened defence of the Inter-High School Rugby League title today when they tackled Victoria High at Carnarvon Park.

Oak Bay, second in league play last season, clashed with Claremont at Beaver Lake Park while Mount View, fifth team in the league, drew a bye.

Each team will play eight league games before playoffs for the Russell Cup (March 7) and Island championship (March 14).

National Gallery 'Toast of Art World'

By INA WARREN

OTTAWA (CP) — Most books on art dismiss the 17th century Flemish painter Jacob Jordaens as merely a "conemporary of Rubens" and no one has seen fit to accord him a big one-man show since his native Antwerp in 1905.

But on the night of Nov. 29 Canada's National Gallery will open a grand-scale exhibition that may make both the gallery and Jordaens the toast of the international art world.

While some institutions of art may be content to acquire a couple of new pictures, rearrange the old ones and then call it an exhibition, the gallery has spent the last two years knocking on some rather exclusive and venerable doors in search of Jordaens' work.

The result is 314 paintings, tapestries and drawings from 18 countries assembled under one roof for the largest exhibition the gallery has ever undertaken.

For the first time in its 53-year history it will charge an entrance fee: $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Some of the greatest art museums in the world have lent works. The gallery has even persuaded a few who are normally a bit stuffy about letting their treasures travel, such as the Hermitage in Leningrad, the Prado in Madrid and the Ashmolean at Oxford.

Queen Elizabeth has lent a tapestry from Holyrood House, Edinburgh and the Italian President Giuseppe Saragat is sending three tapestries.

The 314 works have been drawn from 31 private collections, six dealers and 96 public institutions, most of them museums.

Prime Minister Trudeau will open the exhibition at a gala black-tie affair with 13 ambassadors and international art critics in attendance.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier has said that the exhibition is "due to a fortunate combination of circumstances, not the least of which is the high reputation enjoyed by the National Gallery in international art circles."

Gallery officials themselves consider the Jordaens show an international tour de force, but also a major headache.

TENSION MOUNTED

As the opening day drew nearer tension mounted, along with the unspoken fear that it might not be ready on time.

Art treasures were still arriving by boat and plane, and there is a lot of physical work involved in getting the gallery ready.

Most of the works were flown into Montreal, where they were met by humidity-controlled trucks and some plainclothes RCMP officers to escort them to the gallery. There they are uncrated and checked to see if they have been damaged in any way during the trip.

Because all the paintings are over three centuries old and most of them come from damper climates than Canada, special humidity-control devices have been installed in the gallery to prevent the canvases from drying out and cracking.

The Jordaens show is taking up almost four of the gallery's six floors that are usually given over to exhibitions.

John Macgillivray, the gallery's chief installations officer, has had a Jordaens hanging in his office for weeks to try and find out what colors will provide the best background for the artist's work. As a result, the fourth-floor walls are being painted a soft blue, and the fifth-floor walls grey, while some of the projecting walls will be painted flame red or covered in a rich purple velvet.

A special gallery has also been built to accommodate the larger works. Some of the tapestries are almost 20 feet high and a number of the paintings are almost the size of the 12-foot-high St. Christopher Carrying the Christ Child from the Ulster Museum in Belfast.

Considered a baroque painter, Jordaens (1593-1678) became the leading Flemish painter of his day upon the deaths of Rubens and Van Dyck.

He received commissions from the whole of Europe—Scandinavia, Holland, England and France. But with the waning of the exuberant baroque period in art and the growth of a desire for more classical and reserved painting, Jordaens' work never enjoyed the same esteem as that of Rubens and Van Dyck.

Grandeur of size and color are by far the most striking elements in his paintings.

Although many of his religious and allegorical paintings are more classically tempered in their treatment, most are lavish in the use of color sometimes with an almost garish result.

Full-blown men and women heartily engaged in a drinking bout behind a heavily-laden table is one of Jordaens' favorite themes.

In presenting the Jordaens exhibition the gallery will be making an important contribution to international scholarship.

DOCUMENTED WORKS

The organizer of the show, British scholar Michael Jaffe, has travelled to such disparate places as Leningrad and Dayton, Ohio, to document the history of each work.

The resulting catalogue, to be published in both English and French editions, will be the first complete study of all aspects of Jordaens' work.

Mr. Jaffe has unearthed so many interesting facts that he may have produced the first exhibition catalogue ever to hit the best-seller list.

Catherine the Great of Russia owned two of the works by Jordaens, one of which also once belonged to an 18th century prime minister of England, Sir Robert Walpole.

That extravagant French monarch, Louis XVI, owned a charming peasant scene called As the Old Sing, So the Young Twitter. After he and his Queen, Marie Antoinette, were guillotined during the French Revolution, the painting went to the Louvre.

Another politically infamous name in the list of previous owners is that of Adolf Hitler, who owned Christ Driving the Money-changers from the Temple.

A MEMBER of the staff of The National Gallery in Ottawa brushes a painting by the 17th-century Flemish artist Jacob Jordaens. Over 300 paintings, tapestries and drawings by Jordaens have been obtained from 18 countries for the largest exhibition the gallery has ever undertaken. The Exhibition opens Nov. 29. (CP Photo)

11 Persons Killed In Nigerian Rioting

IBADAN (Reuters) — Brig. Robert Adebayo, military governor of western Nigeria, has warned against lawlessness after at least 11 persons were reported killed in violent demonstrations against taxation measures here Tuesday.

In a broadcast over the state radio and television Tuesday night, he charged unnamed "unscrupulous people with their own selfish ends" with responsibility for a violent protest in which troops fired on about 2,000 angry demonstrators.

The military governor, speaking after an emergency state cabinet meeting, said people died and were injured in an incident outside the Ibadan town hall. But he did not specify numbers.

Hospital sources here said 11 bodies were brought into the mortuary after the crowd, protesting alleged arbitrary new tax assessments in the state, ignored army orders to disperse.

Adebayo said an undercurrent of agitation against the tax measures was of an "explosive nature" in Ibadan, the town of Ishara, 35 miles southwest, and other areas.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, NOV. 27, 1968—PAGE 15

Arthur Mayse

No plaudits here for Dr. Kenneth Strand, the acting president of Simon Fraser University, who last week did what an academic cannot undertake without destroying his usefulness. Faced by an administrative crisis, he called in outside authority, and liberated a campus building at a cost that now becomes apparent.

Some of the pressures and frustrations under which he labored have been reported.

The group that occupied SFU's administration headquarters had refused to parley except on its own terms. I suspect that the heavy thumb of government was also bearing down hard on Dr. Strand. But the thing no university can afford is to breach the closed community which it must be if it is to perform its function.

Whether on his own initiative or under orders from above, the acting president called in the police to do what the mere passage of time would have accomplished.

One result of his act was the arrest of 114 young men and women who had been either so naive as to expect instant justice from a university administration, or so wedded to a cause that they were willing to seek and find a modified form of martyrdom.

★

This was no Columbia University confrontation with broken heads a dime a dozen. For the fact, credit the disciplined calm of RCMP officers who conducted the evacuation, and an occupying group that refused to traffic in violence.

A second result was precisely what the acting president who hollered cop might have expected. Censure from student councils of UBC and Uvic, and on his own embroiled campus, a threatened boycott of classes.

These offshoots matter less than the consequences that an administration courts when it departs from the established custom of settling university disputes internally. Interference by government could be one of these and with it a loss of even such limited status as Simon Fraser enjoys.

SFU has been hard on its presidents, and no doubt about it! But while not condoning the occupying of an administrative headquarters as a protest measure, I suggest that the student body does have valid reason to press for an airing of grievances.

Long before this latest trouble descended on its campus, its admittance procedures were under fire.

Pitchforked into an already bad scene, this latest acting president managed only to make matters worse.

Had he waited, students now aligned against him might have been his allies in cooling a crisis and arriving at an amicable settlement.

★

One fact that all participants in this upheaval should digest is that any breach in their walls is a signal for instant attack by the always suspicious and never truly friendly outside world.

I have heard a shocking amount of bilge about universities and those who people them in the days since Simon Fraser made its most recent intrusion into the news.

Here, for instance, is a man who wonders sincerely why students fail to realize that the university purpose is to turn out a product which will fit neatly into the industrial scene.

It isn't. It is to educate, and through education to induce students to think. And when they learn to think, it is not only natural but desirable that they should wonder, question and when necessity demands, protest against injustice.

I don't excuse the method by which the group at Simon Fraser chose to seek a hearing. But we are confronted by greater dangers than student unrest.

The gravest of these is the authoritarianism that provokes it.

Students Fighting In Wrong Arena —Alumni Official

Students seeking social changes should do so in the political arena rather than on campus, an alumni group at Port Alberni was told Tuesday.

"An attack against society as a whole is really quite beyond the responsibility of university administrators," said Jack Stathers, executive director of University of B.C. Alumni Association.

"I believe the radical students should carry their campaign for wider social reform into the area where it belongs — the political arena," he said.

He added the reason universities have become a battleground for change is that students are often the persons most concerned about "social injustice."

They are not committed to defending the status quo and they are free "to think and act in an orthodox manner."

He said universities are vulnerable to these attacks because they profess to be highly democratic and concerned with freedom of thought and expression.

"Students are sick and tired of being sold a bill of goods.

"We have taught them to question the system . . . to fight bigotry and prejudice . . . challenged them to build a better world."

Mr. Stathers said those who advocate demonstrations, strikes and sit-ins are generally bent on social revolution. But most students still believe changes can be made through discussion and negotiations.

He said universities are hard-pressed to keep their doors open to all who apply to enter.

"To expect academic excellence and widespread university reform in the midst of confusion and tension . . . is to expect nearly the impossible."

GRADS SLAM ACTIVISTS

Graduate students of University of Victoria Tuesday condemned "activists" who upset the learning process.

The Graduate Student Society, in a press release, said it backs Uvic's Dean Robert Wallace in condoning police action at Simon Fraser University last week, when 114 students were arrested.

Astronomy student at Uvic Jack Penfold said the stand was endorsed by the Graduate Students' Society at a recent meeting.

The press statement said:

"The graduate student body of the University of Victoria views with alarm the increasing student unrest, and the dangerous application of politics of confrontation.

"It is indeed unfortunate that a small minority of activists (student and non-student) are allowed to upset the atmosphere of learning for the majority of students who are sincere in their motive for higher education."

"We are concerned that, as a result of these demonstrations, the academic standing of the University may suffer.

"We support Dean Wallace in his view condoning the use of police action to end the two-day occupation of the Simon Fraser Administration Building. The actions of these students is destructive in nature and the cost in time and material will add to the higher cost of education."

PEACEFUL

The grads said they believe a universtiy must be prepared to change through "peaceful communication and evaluation of ideas."

They said that at Uvic five sub-committees provide this means of communication for all members of the university.

"We therefore do not condone the confrontation of a sit-in by students at a recent faculty of arts and science meeting.

"We wish to express our support and confidence in the administration for their attitude and initiative in setting up this communication link."

The society represents 188 students out of a student body of about 4,900.

Farmers Ask Action To Halt Land Waste

B.C. farmers are discontented at the lack of government action to prevent the waste of farmlands.

They were also critical at the B.C. Federation of Agriculture convention today of the government's failure to implement the recommendations of a royal commission on expropriation of property.

The commission, headed by J. V. Clyne in 1963, recommended a uniform act covering all factors pertaining to property expropriation.

Under the present system, expropriation is possible under various acts, each differing in their requirements.

'WITHOUT DELAY'

"The government went to considerable expense to enquire into expropriation proceedings and has done nothing to implement the recommendations," said one delegate. "It should be done without delay."

Growers also asked the government to make a study on the feasibility of establishing single corridors for public and private services, such as oil pipelines, transmission power lines, roads and railways across farm lands.

One Chilliwack delegate pointed out that there are six corridors in his district for various services.

Acid Throwing 'False Story'

Saanich police today have called off a search for a suspected acid thrower after investigation of what they say was a false story.

Terry Johnson, 16, 7116 West Saanich, told police a youth in a car threw acid at him while he was hitch-hiking on West Saanich Road late Sunday night.

However police said today he had admitted to them the story was false and was one he had given his mother to explain a mark on his neck.

Degree Status Requested By Royal Roads

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said Tuesday that both Royal Roads and College Miltaire Royal at St. Johns, Quebec, have suggested they be permitted to grant degrees.

He said no decision has been made to permit them to do so.

Only Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., now grants bachelor's degrees to graduates.

The 215 cadets at Royal Roads must transfer to RMC after two years to complete their studies.

Mr. Cadieux is spending two days at Royal Roads during the annual meeting of Canadian Military College advisory board.

He said future plans for the local collage will not be specifically discussed during the meeting.

MET BY LEWIS

The minister arrived at Victoria airport aboard a Canadian Forces Yukon Tuesday night. As he led board members from the four-engine aircraft, he received a snappy salute and a greeting from Air Force Col. K. E. Lewis, Royal Roads commandant, waiting on the tarmac.

The board is composed of 12 government, military and civilian representatives and four representatives of the ex-cadets clubs of the military colleges.

Formed in 1954, the board advises and makes recommendations to the minister on operation of the colleges.

Mr. Cadieux denied objections from the Chamber of Commerce and other local business interets that the base exchange at CFB Esquimalt provides "unfair competition."

'PROVIDE SERVICE'

The exchange, called Canex, opened Nov. 1. He said the purpose of the exchange was not to cut prices, but to "provide service" for military personnel.

He said the Canadian Forces had to provide recreational and shopping facilities from non-public funds for personnel stationed on isolated bases.

It was then only fair to provide the same facilities to personnel on all bases.

The department has indicated plans to withdraw the garrison stationed at Work Point Barracks in Esquimalt, but Mr. Cadieux said a definite decision on the future of both Work Point and the naval school at Naden would not be made until a defence review was completed.

He did not say when a review or report would be made.

BLOOD CLINIC SHOOTS PAST 400 TARGET

The two-day blood donor clinic at Red Cross House exceeded its 400 pint objective by seven pints, A. T. Lashmar, blood donor panel supervisor, said today.

Only 160 pints were given Monday, but 247 volunteers turned up Tuesday to boost donations past the target.

More blood donor clinics are scheduled for the first week of December.

On Dec. 2 a clinic will be held at Royal Roads and will move to the Canadian Forces Base at Esquimalt on Dec. 3.

Board Asks Authority For Extended Outfall

FIRM HIRED IN ATTEMPT TO FIND FOIL

Northwest Hydrofoil Lines said today that Jon Lindbergh of Ocean Systems, Inc., has been hired to try to recover the port foil ripped from the hydrofoil Victoria near Port Townsend a week ago.

William Niedermair, Northwest Hydrofoil president, said recovery of the foil, which he valued at upwards of $250,000, would save eight months' time in getting the commuter ship back in service. Niedermair said he doubts the foil is too badly damaged to repair, but even if it is many of its parts can be used.

The Victoria was southbound from Victoria to Seattle when it struck an unidentified underwater object off Point Wilson.

Navy Plane In Trouble

Naval firemen were spreading foam on a Patricia Bay airstrip at noon hour preparing for a crash landing by a Canadian Forces Tracker aircraft.

There were two men aboard.

They said the plane originally planned a landing at 9:45 a.m. but the pilot found he could not lower his wheels.

Other aircraft were sent up to attempt to see the snag in the landing apparatus and advise the pilot how to correct it. This proved impossible.

Bid to Force Key Decision

By JIM HUME

The Regional District Board will place the sewer outfalls versus treatment plant issue in the provincial lap this weekend.

Scheduled for publication in the Times legal columns Saturday is a small notice stating the regional board has applied to the Pollution Control Board to extend the Macaulay Point outfall to a length of 4,800 feet.

The regional board is in effect asking the provincial government to make a specific decision on outfalls with treatment plants or outfalls, deep and long, which will discharge raw but comminuted sewage into the sea.

Regional officials said they did not expect a quick reply from the Pollution Control Board.

NEXT YEAR

It is more than likely that it will be 1969 before an answer is received.

The outfall at present is listed at zero feet on a low tide.

Cost of the outfall, if approved by the PCB, would be about $1.5 million.

Cost of the outfall if health officials insist on treatment prior to disposal would be slightly less but with $3.4 million added to the over-all cost for a treatment plant.

By building a primary treatment plant, the minimum Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has said he will permit, the length of the deepsea outfall would be reduced by 20 per cent.

The Macaulay Point outfall, located near the western entrance to Victoria harbor, was constructed in 1913.

As it stands now the Macaulay Point outfall discharges raw sewage into three feet of water just below the water mark.

The outfall serves parts of Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt.

PRIORITY

Regarded as a number one priority by consulting engineers the extenssion of the outfall, with or without a treatment plant, would go a long way to solving the pollution problems in the Colquitz Basin.

Sewage from the Colquitz basin would be collected through a trunk system to a pumping station located near Hampton Park. From the pumping station it would flow by gravity to the Selkirk siphon on the existing Northwest Trunk line.

Both siphon and sections of the Northwest Trunk would require reconstruction to handle increased flow.

Before final disposal sewage would be comminuted (chopped up) and pumped into the sea at a mimimum depth of 50 feet and 4,800 feet from shore.

Drinkers Face Automatic Suspensions

Impaired Drivers Peterson Target

Impaired drivers will soon face an automatic one-month suspension of driving privilege following a first conviction, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson indicated Tuesday.

The attorney-general said he had recommended this policy to the superintendent of motor vehicles and would like to see it come into effect as soon as possible.

"Hopefully before the festive season," he added.

He said the superintendent has the authority to invoke a mandatory suspension and that he is convinced a more severe approach to the problem of drinking drivers is required "even where the courts may decide against taking such action."

In a speech to the Canadian Federation on Alcohol Problems Tuesday evening in Vancouver Mr. Peterson said the drinking driver "is undoubtedly one of the greatest hazards in the country today."

RISK KNOWN

"I think it would be helpful for all drivers in the province to know before they take a drink that by so doing they run the risk of losing their right to drive for a definite period.

"I would like to see a mandatory suspension of the right to drive for at least a month without any exceptions whatsoever," he said.

The attorney-general said his proposal is not aimed at motorists given 24-hour roadside suspensions.

Victoria magistrates usually suspend a person's licence or recommend suspension following a first conviction for impaired driving. The suspensions have often been for three or four months or more. Drivers occasionally are given permission to drive during working hours.

NO LEEWAY

Mr. Peterson said his recommendation was that no driving to work privileges be given as it would detract from the effectiveness of the policy. Even if the magistrate did allow privileges the superintendent could take the driver off the road completely for the first month regardless, he said.

He said the superintendent's authority would superimpose that of the magistrage. Magistrates would not be bound by the policy unless it was a law.

Magistrates in quite a number of areas don't give a licence suspension following a conviction but leave it up to the department.

"I want to persuade the driving public of the basic wisdom and rightness of that well-worn slogan If you drink, don't drive — If you drive, don't drink," said Mr. Peterson.

"Every citizen should understand this is the safe and intelligent decision to make."

The attorney-general said a further announcement would be made soon regarding the initiation of the new policy.

Students Got the Message Loud, Clear From Michener

By DON VIPOND

Governor-General Michener visited schools in Greater Victoria this morning — and talked the language students understand.

He declared a school holiday, a full day off sometime in the next two weeks, but said when it would be was a secret.

A half-day holiday had been anticipated. The announcement seemed to catch department of education and school board officials a little off-balance. No spokesmen seemed to know when it would be but most said it would be province-wide.

TEACHERS TOO

Students responded with mighty cheers and clapping wherever he delivered the glad tidings. At Oak Bay Junior the teachers applauded when he said it was for them too.

It was a whirlwind dash which began at Central Junior and included official stops at Oak Bay Junior, Reynolds Junior-Senior and Esquimalt Junior before a private luncheon at Government House.

But there were colorful moments along the way as the speeding cavalcade, led by four city motorcycle policemen, stopped where children lined the road waving flags, cheering and clapping.

At St. Margaret's School on Fort Street Mr. Michener left his limousine to walk alongside the girls in their red berets, chatting and waving. He crossed the street and returned along the throng lining the other side.

CLOSE LOOK

At Willows school he walked close to a quarter-mile to give the excited youngsters a close-up look at the Queen's representive in Canada.

Among the hundreds of students in front of Dean Heights and Lansdowne Junior was one boy with a placard which read "Up with the Governor-General."

Children in B.C. are among the most favored in Canada in education facilities, he told students at Central Junior.

He urged them to seize opportunities when they are presented because they only come once in a lifetime.

"You must think in terms of the moment," he said, adding if he had his life to live over, he would have done a number of things differently.

The crowd at Oak Bay junior filled the auditorium and jammed bleachers in the nearby gymnasium. The vice-regal couple passed a guard of honor in the gym before taking the only route to the auditorium stage — through the spruced-up boys' dressing rooms.

As Mr. Michener left the school by the front hall he paused for a look at the art display.

"That looks vaguely familiar," he said to principal Peter Boldt of a papier mache figure in a stripped bathing suite with a de Gaulle-like nose.

PROUD MOMENT for Garnett Moen, 14, president of the students' council at Central Junior high school, came this morning when he made presentation to Governor-General Roland Michener, visiting Greater Victoria schools. Micheners leave Victoria for Vancouver Thursday morning in their first official visit to B.C. since Mr. Michener was named the Queen's representative in Canada 18 months ago. (Times Photo)

What Happens When the VIPs Disappear Behind Closed Doors?

By JOHN MIKA

When the striped-pants set holds a ceremonial tete-a-tete with all the pomp of red carpets, red coats and red maple leaf bunting, what do they talk about after all the protocol requirements have been met?

Do the prestigious visitors show the normal deference of guests by complimenting the neighborhood and the decor — just like old Harry and his wife when they dropped in on you from the east?

And does the host preen a little under the flattery, offer to drive the guests around to see a bit more of the neighborhood, reveal some of his cherished plans for the future, just like you do?

And does the guest press a snapshop on the host? And does the host smile and say he's grateful for the thoughtfulness ? And does . . .?

Well, there were seven spectators who turned out Tuesday to witness Premier Bennett greet Governor-General Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener on the front steps of the Legislative Building and 10 minutes later there were nine to see the vice-regal party depart after Mr. Michener's first official visit to the provincial headquarters.

If those spectators were curious as to what took place when the dignitaries, police and press disappeared behind the closed doors of Premier Bennett's office, here's a brief rundown of most of the pleasantries and chit-chat which were exchanged:

The premier smiled delightedly as the governor-general repeatedly addressed him as "Mr. Prime Minister"; Repeatedly remarked on the astonishing rate of development in the province; And obliquely admitted that Mr. Bennett has even more "trophies and mementos" accumulated during years of prominent public service.

"We have a new museum now," said Mr. Bennett, his face lighting up as he suggested the Governor-General might like to see it.

With the large vice-regal party settled in his office, with Mr. and Mrs. Michener on either side of him, the premier opened the conversation with: "You see, Your Excellency, we have a very modest office here in keeping with our effort not only to govern well but also to think always of economy."

Mr. Michener, former Conservative Commons speaker and high commissioner to India just prior to his present post, rejoined with:

"Ah, I am impressed with the modesty of the executive centre of the province.

"But it's full of trophies I notice. You must lead a very busy life, Mr. Prime Minister."

The premier quickly added that his house in Kelowna and apartment in Oak Bay also are crammed with souvenirs, trophies and mementos presented to him at various public occasions because his office wasn't big enough to hold them all.

"I've begun experiencing the same thing as I travel across Canada," replied Mr. Michener.

"I have a billiard room . . . that I'm beginning to fill with trophies and mementos.

"It will become quite an exciting place."

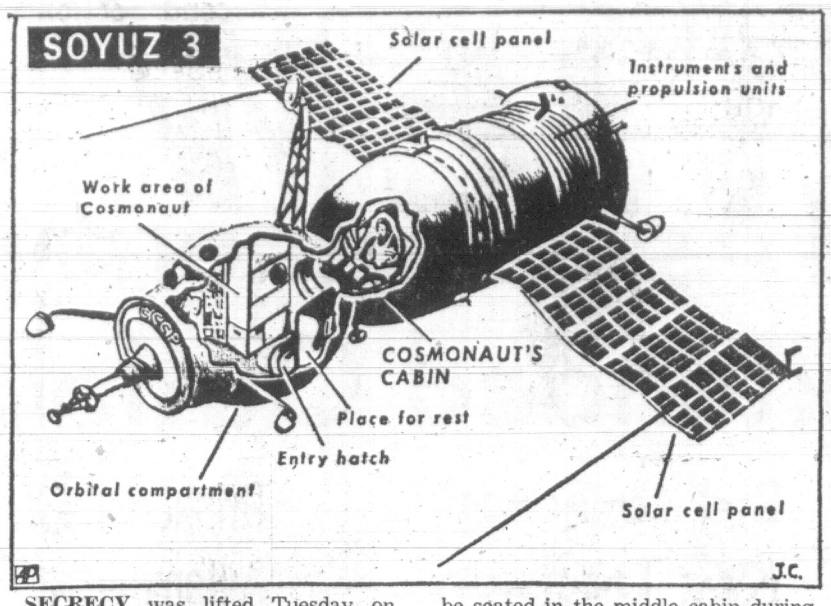
The governor-general and the premier added to one another's memento collection when Mr. Bennett was presented with an autographed photo of the vice-regal couple while Mr. Michener received a totem pole and Mrs. Michener a brooch with the province's dogwood seal.

After more pleasantries about previous visits to the province by both Mr. and Mrs. Michener, the two men joshed a little about politics after Mr. Bennett smilingly noted that Mr. Michener had exceptional background in the field.

"Oh, I had some connection with politics in my unregenerate days but I'm not involved in politics anymore," said Mr. Michener.

"I'm above politics now, Mr. Prime Minister," the governor-general smiled.

"Above politics?" questioned an equally-smiling premier. "Or beyond politics?"



SECRECY was lifted Tuesday on Russia's new manned spacecraft, Soyuz 3, which would be used for a trip to the moon and return. The drawing, which appeared in the newspaper Pravda, described a three-compartment vehicle. Astronauts would be seated in the middle cabin during launch and return as well as during key manoeuvres in space but could also live and work in forward cabin. A rear unit houses instruments and rocket engines. (AP Wirephoto)

SPACE SPECTACULAR PLANNED BY SOVIET

By HENRY SHAPIRO

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is preparing to launch its most spectacular manned space flight yet by dispatching shortly at least two, and probably three, men on a circumlunar flight, according to informed sources.

The sources said the moon flight may be undertaken before the launching of the American Apollo 8 set for Dec. 21.

Space experts said that the immensely successful flights of the recovered Zond 5 and Zond 6 placed the Soviet Union, in some respects, ahead of the United States in the race to the moon and whetted their appetite to accomplish another one of their numerous pioneering space "firsts."

Officially the Russians are denying that they are racing anybody to the moon. In his most recent press conference the country's topmost science administrator, Academy of Sciences president Mstyslav Keldysh, answering a correspondent's question, had this to say:

"When two scientists work independently in a related field are they competing? Probably and to a certain degree they are. But this must not be a determining factor because if something is done for the sake of competition science could be forgotten."

Such cautious opinion was inevitable on the part of an eminent scientist.

But the Russians as a people are no less nationally ambitious than anyone else and from all the talk heard in circles close to cosmonautics they are determined to beat the United States to the moon, if possible.

Bulgaria Continues To Push Hard Line

SOFIA (AP)—Bulgaria, never a problem child in the Communist family, has won new ideological top marks in the Czechoslovak crisis.

The Sofia leaders were among the pacemakers in denouncing the Prague liberalization drive. They joined in the occupation of the country, and later proclaimed an uncompromising fight at home against sympathizers with the "counter-revolution."

They have pushed the harsh line, although it meant further alienation from their two Balkan Communist neighbors, Romania and Yugoslavia, which challenge the doctrine of the Moscow supremacists.

Man-in-the-street reaction to the Czechoslovak events seems largely indifferent, despite attempts by the party press to arouse interest with an unusual fare of sex and crime reports on the perilous life of Bulgarian occupiers.

The story was told of a Bulgarian sergeant who was abducted by Czechoslovak "counter-revolutionaries" and then died rather than tell military secrets. There was the piece about Bulgarian soldiers who steadfastly refused the advances of Czech girls sent on "seduce-and-debauch" missions by their mothers.

By and large, popular feelings about the occupation appeared summed up by a young truck driver who dismissed the topic with the words "That's all politics—and who cares?"

PAPERS SNAPPED UP

Among educated Bulgarians reaction was somewhat different. Copies of French and Italian newspapers were snapped up because they contained word on dissenting views.

Intellectuals who maintained contacts with Westerners—despite a recent string of arrests for alleged espionage—readily expressed their dismay after the invasion. But there is no record of any significant demonstration of sympathy with the Czech liberals.

Yet Bulgarians have been warned against "manifestations . . . here and there . . . which resemble all that led to the counter-revolution in Czechoslovakia."

"Persons who are either overtly or covertly rejoicing over the successes of the counter-revolution in Czechoslovakia must be prevented in good time from spreading this hostile poison," Lt.-Gen. Mikho Spassov of the State Security Committee stated in a prominently displayed article. Party commentators echoed his warnings.

Such ideological zeal is not surprising from a regime whose close links with Moscow are based on traditions that date deep into pre-Communist times. Since the Communist takeover after the Second World War, Sofia has never strayed off the official Kremlin line. Unlike East Germany, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, it never has been the scene of anti-Soviet revolt.

Thousands Of Students End Strike

MEXICO CITY (AP) — University of Mexico officials reported Tuesday that 35,000 students have returned to their classes after a four-month strike that climaxed in bloodshed.

But reporters at the campus said thousands of students were continuing to strike.

The campus has been relatively quiet since Oct. 2 when at least 35 persons died in a night of shooting. The National Student Strike Council agreed to mark time during the Olympic Games that followed.

The strike centred on student protests against police invasion of their campuses. In Mexico, university campuses traditionally are off-limits to police.

City Groups Support Indian Friendship Centre

Seven city organizations have pledged support for the establishment of an Indian Friendship Centre in Victoria.

Several other clubs and societies are expected to join the drive to raise funds for the project.

It also received the support of the South Vancouver Island Tribal Association, the Nootka, Alert Bay and Hazelton Indina bands.

And to start the ball rolling about 150 Indian and non-Iidians at an organizing meeting chipped in $200 in a hat collection. The contributions ranged from pennies to $20 bills.

The meeting at the Institute of Adult Studies was sponsored by the Klauhawesic Club, a social organization composed of Indian and Eskimos attending school and university. It was chaired by Harry Dick of Victoria.

Friendship Centres have been established in all major cities across Canada.

Their main object is to help Indians moving off isolated reserves adjust to urban life.

In the past three years, it is estimated about 900 Indians, many from the West Coast of Vancouver Island and northern British Columbia, have come to Victoria. The figure is expected to double by 1970.

GRANTS AVAILABLE

Mr. Dick said Indians need a building in Victoria where they could receive counselling services and discuss their problems with one another.

Grants from senior governments are available for such a centre, providing the project is supported by the public, he said.

Victorians were not slow in accepting the challenge. Representatives of various organizations and churches quickly promised the full support of their members.

They had heard first-hand accounts of how difficult it is for many Indians to adjust to city life.

Mrs. Beatrice Jack of Nootka related how she came to Victoria with her sick husband to see a doctor.

"I was lost," she said. "I was told by the welfare department that my husband's case was the responsibility of the Indian affairs Department.

"Indian Affairs told me it was a responsibility of the welfare department. So I went back and forth, back and forth until my husband became critically ill. I thought he was going to die."

She said a policeman finally came to her aid and she was able through his efforts to get her husband admitted to hospital.

TERRIBLY LONELY

Larry Thompson of Kamloops said the only "friendship centre" Indians have to day in Victoria is the beer parlor.

"They have nowhere else to go — nowhere else where they can meet and discuss their problems," he said. "Some are terribly lonely. And when they don't drink enough beer, they are kicked out."

Helen Hunt, wife of Thunderbird carver Henry Hunt, said her home has been used as a friendship centre for years.

"Eveyone who hasn't a place to stay the night seems to turn up at my house. Sometimes police bring them there."

"This week 35 people sat down to dinner at my home," she added. "I don't mind doing this for my people, but you know this involves a lot of cooking."

DIFFERENT LIFE

Thomas Dennis, a student, said the problems of Indian youth is quite different from those of non-Indians because they were being exposed to a different way of life. They are on the whole passive and need to be encouraged, he said.

Organizations which supported the project were the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society, the social action committee of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, St. Vincent de Paul, the YMCA - YWCA, the Foster Parent Association, the Greater Victoria Citizen's Council and the First United Church Women's Club.

Representatives of several other clubs also said they would ask their members to support the drive for a centre.

Graduates Lose Special Status

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A larger share of the burden of fighting the Vietnam war is shifting to the highly educated young men in the nation.

By next spring, every fourth draftee is expected to be a college graduate compared to one in 20 last spring.

To "the establishment," criticized for letting the less privileged do most of the fighting, it means many more of its sons going into combat.

To President-elect Nixon, it means trying to attract young people into a national coalition while draft protests ring in his ears.

DISRUPTION

To the army, it means making soldiers for slogging through rice paddies and humping over Vietnam's highlands out of English and philosophy majors and other highly-educated young men.

To graduate schools, it means more disruption.

And to Pentagon manpower experts, it means the pendulum of unfairness on who shall serve is swinging the other way.

The reason for all this is that draft calls are going up at a time when college graduates are the most logical men to call.

Draft boards are under orders to call the oldest men first. And under the draft amendments of 1967, men in graduate school can no longer be deferred from induction unless they are in medical specialties.

Graduate students who get the summons from selective service must report after the end of the semester in which they are enrolled—meaning the grace period will be up for many of them this January. Before the 1967 act, they had been allowed to finish graduate school. This is still the case for undergraduates in good standing.

Because the oldest men (up to 26) are most vulnerable to the draft the graduate schools are likely to lose not only the men already enrolled but also those who planned to go there right after getting their first college degrees.

This one-two punch is expected to hit the graduate schools early next year. They will have to make their plans accordingly for the 1969-70 academic year. Some of their assistant professors may be among those called, since a student who has received a deferment is vulnerable to the age of 35.

Already the mix of draftees is changing. Last month, 20 per cent of the draftees were college graduates. By early 1969, Pentagon manpower specialists believe the proportion will be 30 per cent or higher. Those figures compare with 5 per cent for all of fiscal 1968.

PM Defends Languages Bill Validity

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has rejected arguments against the validity of his official languages bill that had been raised by J. T. Thorson, retired president of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Mr. Trudeau said in a letter to Judge Thorson that he sees nothing in sections of the British North America Act cited by the Manitoba-born jurist that should prevent the government from going ahead with the bill.

The bill, now before the Commons, would declare English and French to be official languages of Canada for all federal government purposes. It would establish bilingual districts in various parts of the country where federal services would be available to the public in both languages.

Famed Warship's Bell Missing

TORONTO (CP) — Officers of Haida Inc., a group of men who saved the famous warship from the demolition heap four years ago, issued a plea Tuesday for the return of the ship's bell.

Neil Bruce, president of the group, said the 40-pound, bronze bell was first reported missing Friday and police have been unable to find it.

"What's important is to recover it," he said. "We'll pick it up with no questions asked. That bell went with Haida through some of the Second World War's fiercest sea fighting and several tours of duty in Korea."

The ship now is moored on the Toronto waterfront as a tourist attraction.

PCs Take Seats In Nova Scotia Bvelections

HALIFAX (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives scored victories in two Nova Scotia by-elections Tuesday, retaining one seat and picking up another from the Liberals.

The byelections were held less than two weeks after Liberal Opposition Leader Gerald Regan charged that irregularities were involved in land transactions in a government-backed housing project near here.

The Progressive Conservative government held on to Cumberland Centre in one of Tuesday's byelections and took Dartmouth North from the Liberals in the other.

The byelections left the party standing in the 46-seat Nova Scotia legislature as follows: Conservatives 40, Liberals five, vacant one.

The Conservatives won 40 seats in the last provincial election in May, 1967. The Liberals won the other six seats, including Dartmouth North.

PREMIER PLEASED

Premier G. I. Smith, who succeeded Robert Stanfield in September, 1967, said he was pleased with the results of Tuesday's victories.

Raymond Smith of Springhill, the hard-luck Nova Scotia coal town, retained Cumberland Centre for the Conservatives, but his margin of victory was 2,036 votes to 1,483 for Springhill Mayor William Mont, the Liberal candidate.

Conservative Gerald Wambolt, a Dartmouth alderman, scored a 44-vote victory over Liberal Glen Bagnell in Dartmouth North. Election-night figures gave Mr. Wambolt 2,837 votes to Mr. Bagnell's 2,790.

Mr. Regan's charges that middlemen had made substantial profits by buying land in a government-backed land-assembly area near Halifax and then re-selling to the housing commission prompted Premier Smith to order a public inquiry last week.

Offshore Permits

OTTAWA (CP)—The mines department announced Tuesday that 798 offshore oil and gas exploration permits were issued in October, covering about 17,301,300 acres of Canada's continental shelf. Of the permits issued, 509 were for exploration off the east coast, 288 were for the Hudson Bay area and one was for the west coast.

Communications Cut

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An electrical fire in a control panel at British Columbia Telephone Co's Greenstone microwave sight near here caused a 38-minute break in telephone and teletype circuits Tuesday morning between Kamloops and Vancouver, Williams Lake and Salmon Arm.

Canada Link In FBI Arrests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI announced the arrest of six alleged Costa Nostra members Tuesday and ordered the surrender of a seventh described as "the overlord of crime" in western New York and southern Ontario.

Attorney General Ramsey Clark said the seven were among 10 persons charged Tuesday in complaints issued in Buffalo, N.Y., in connection with interstate gambling. Three others are still sought.

FBI director J. Edgar Hoover said the man ordered to surrender was Stefano Magaddino, 77, a Niagara Falls, N.Y., funeral parlor operator. Hoover said he "has been publicly identified as a commissioned member of La Cosa Nostra and the overlord of crime in western New York and southern Ontario, Canada."

PART OF EMPIRE

Magaddino is an officer of the Magaddino Memorial Chapel funeral parlor, an alleged gambling headquarters.

Among the others arrested were Benjamin Nicoletti, Sr., and Peter Magaddino, 51, both of whom Hoover identified as part of the "Magaddino empire of organized crime." The others arrested were described as bookmaker associates and employees of Benjmain Nicoletti, Jr., 29, Niagara Falls, who is still sought.

Hoover said the complaints "identified Stefano Magaddino as engaged in international bookmaking and certain betting with individuals in the province of Ontario, Canada."

He said the complaints also identified the elder Nicoletti as "the over-all supervisor of Magaddino's gambling operation."

GROSS REVENUE DOWN IN MONTREAL LOTTERY

MONTREAL (CP) — Gross revenue from the November voluntary tax draw was the lowest yet at $658,548.

Montreal's executive committee chairman, Lucien Saulnier, told city councillors Tuesday that except for one month, draw revenue from the voluntary tax scheme had been steadily declining since its inception last May.

Gross revenue for the month of May had been $1,255,648—less than half the monthly average of $2,666,666 predicted by Mayor Jean Drapeau when he introduced the voluntary tax idea.

The scheme was originally intended to bring in $32,000,000 a year in an effort to eliminate a $28,000,000 municipal budgetary deficit.

INCREASED AID FORTHCOMING

By JOYCE FAIRBAIN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada will provide an additional $1.6 million in food aid to starving civilians in Nigeria-Biafra, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced Tuesday night.

The statement came as the Commons ended a full day's debate on Canadian efforts in the civil war.

Canada's total contribution in food and drugs now comes to $2.6 million plus the additional cost of sending and maintaining Hercules transports for airlifts in the war area.

The latest relief supplies will be shipped early in the new year. They will consist mainly of salt fish which is still considered the main requirement for civilians suffering from protein deficiencies in both Nigeria and the rebel state of Biafra.

The external affairs minister also said he "earnestly hoped" Biafran leader Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu would consent immediately to allow planes bearing relief — but not arms to land in his territory in daylight.

Until such an undertaking is received Canada's Hercules aircraft will remain grounded and Mr. Sharp said it was tragic that food stocks are piling up because they cannot be moved into starving areas.

He re-stated that Canada stood ready to assist in any negotiated settlement if approached by both sides in the war, and would give constructive consideration to peace-keeping operations should such a settlement be reached.

Both he and Prime Minister Trudeau repeated their belief that a formal initiative for a ceasefire at the United Nations at this time would be unproductive and produce widespread hostility in Africa.

Relief for Nigeria Called Small Bow

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Stanfield says the government's attitude toward the Nigerian civil war seems to be motivated by a desire to "keep out of this thing," and its policy simply a small bow to public feeling.

Mr. Stanfield said Tuesday during a one-day Commons debate on the Nigerian situation that government measures taken so far have been ineffective in relieving suffering or putting an end to hostilities.

"It would seem to me that the attitude of the government has been one of a desire to keep out of this thing," said the Conservative leader. A stream of criticism in the same vein came from other opposition members.

Prime Minister Trudeau rejected opposition demands that Canada involve itself more deeply in efforts to resolve the Nigerian conflict as well as relieve starvation.

Mr. Trudeau said he had assured Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the Nigerian head of state, of Canada's continuing support of his government as that of all Nigeria. At the same time Canada wished to see an early conclusion of hostilities on terms permitting Nigerians to live within a federal structure which guarantees the personal and economic security of all persons.

A direct challenge to the government's Nigerian policy was easily defeated late Tuesday night. The vote was 120 to 77 against an amendment to a motion calling on the House to concur in the report of its standing committee on external affairs, which has been studying the Nigerian question.

Eight Creditistes and 20 New Democrats voted with 49 Conservatives against the government. Under the amendment, proposed by R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal), Conservative external affairs spokesman, Canada would take the initiative in trying to persuade countries selling arms to either Nigeria or Biafra to cease doing so.

'Human Zoo' Villages Protested by Indian

GOSNELL
. . . attacks ministers

By PETE LOUDON

"They hire us last and they fire us first," a Nass River Indian delegate told the Native Brotherhood Tuesday.

"I want to be put on a job first and be the last to be fired," said James Gosnell, berating white employers.

Final speaker in the four-day convention here, Mr. Gosnell said too many employers take the view, "He's a poor Indian, a born criminal in the eyes of society."

He told platform guests, Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson and Coast Chilcotin MP Paul St. Pierre:

"Our villages are nothing but a human zoo."

★

Then he turned his wrath on B.C. provincial cabinet ministers. The premier and four ministers had been invited to speak to the convention but only Highways Minister W. D. Black appeared and he left complaining of being badgered.

"They were dodging us . . . why didn't they come and hear us out?

"I want the province to help me. I pay taxes right and left."

Mr. Gosnell said it has been proven that for every $3 spent on white residents only $1 is spent for Indians on a per capita basis.

Mr. Gosnell didn't extend his attack to include Mr. Chretien. He called him a "sincere minister."

Mr. Chretien, in his address, said he wants to see the Canadian Indian playing the role of his own master.

★

"We want to give the Indian opportunity to make his own decisions. I see our department as an instrument to safeguard the rights of the Indian. But he should make his own decisions."

He told a questioner the Indian Act could not be scrapped now.

"But perhaps in the future . . . I hope one day it will not be needed." He said when the Indian achieves equality there will be no Indian Act "and I think everyone will welcome it."

Mr. Chretien, young and with a pronounced French accent marking him also as a member of a Canadian minority group, said a series of talks had been held across Canada with native Indians.

★

A new act will be drafted in June of 1969 and circulated to all Indians. Then another series of talks will be held before the revised act goes to Parliament.

While the act is in committee stage groups and individuals will still be able to be heard by the legislators, he promised.

"I hope it will be ready in a year or more . . . I do not want to rush too much."

Mr. Chretien said that before native Indians could fully realize their ambition to take part in the electronic age of the 21st century, a greater level of education must be achieved. He said his department planned to open every door to help them achieve this.

Before closing, the convention passed resolutions calling for better housing and education opportunities and various changes in the Indian Fishermen's Assistance Act.

Ratepayers 'Ignored' By Council

MAPLE BAY — Kurt Horn began his third-term as president of Maple Bay Ratepayers' Association by flaying North Cowichan council.

He said the council "failed to take any notice" of a ratepayers' request for a launching ramp at the present yacht club site.

"We should tell council in no uncertain terms they either stop asking us where we want it or go ahead and build it there," he told a ratepayers' meeting.

North Cowichan Recreation Commissioner Norm Bevan said Maple Bay had a choice of a launching ramp or a tennis court.

After lengthy discussion regarding cost and necessity, ratepayers' decided to draft a letter to North Cowichan Council requesting both.

DOUGLAS, LEWIS SPEAK IN DUNCAN ON FRIDAY

DUNCAN—The two top men in the federal New Democratic party will speak at a smorgasbord and dance in Moose Hall off Lakes Road at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Leader Tommy Douglas and his deputy David Lewis also will hold a press conference.

It is Mr. Lewis' first visit to the area since his election in 1962.

Mr. Douglas, defeated in the general election in Burnaby-Richmond, is seeking election in the Nanaimo-Cowichan-the-Islands' by-election Feb. 10. He will speak to students at Cowichan senior secondary Friday afternoon.

Ban 'Nonsense' On Garbage Units

A Parksville bylaw banning garbage grinders in kitchens was termed "nonsense" Tuesday.

Michael J. Griffin, a member of the executive of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association, said he had never heard anything "quite as ridiculous as the claim that kitchen garbage grinders created havoc with sewer lines."

He was commenting on a Parksville bylaw, now in the final reading stage, which will ban the use of kitchen grinders.

The municipal council made its decision on the advice of Bruce Tait of Willis, Cunliffe and Tait, consulting engineers.

CLOG SEWERS

Mr. Tait said the course grind from kitchen grinding units could clog sewers where grades and flows are minimal.

He added that damage could also be caused to sewage treatment plants by the tin cans, bottles, acids and grease put through the grinders.

"I don't think he did his homework very well," said Mr. Griffin. "You can't get a tin can through a domestic grinder and you're a fool if you try putting bottles through."

Phil Mariachere, Advance Services Limited, Vancouver, a major manufacturer of garbage dispoal units, said he was surprised to read of the consulting engineers advice.

"We have about 10,000 units out in this area and if they are used properly they alleviate sewage problems rather than create them," he said.

"Tin cans just won't go through a kitchen grinder, glass will but shouldn't. If a kitchen unit is used properly it won't create problems."

Mr. Mariachere noted that many cities in the United States now had bylaws which made the kitchen garbage disposal unit an essential feature of new homes.

"In Detroit, Dearborne, Beverly Hills, Pomona and even beautiful downtown Burbank you just can't move into a new home until it is equipped with a disposal unit," he said.

Mr. Mariachere said Kelowna is the only other municipality in B.C. with a ban on grinders.

"I've written to council there asking why but they never replied."

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

'How Long Can You Keep Beauty of the Islands?'

GANGES — Former Nanaimo magistrate Eric Winch told a public meeting here the Gulf Islands are facing tragedy unless action is taken quickly to prevent further pollution.

Contesting the Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands riding for the Liberal party in the federal byelection Feb. 10, Mr. Winch said adequate warnings on the exceedingly hazardous situation has already been uttered by the world's top scientists.

"I wonder how long you can hang on to the natural beauties of these islands?" he said. "Would you believe a mere 35 years unless something drastic is done and done soon?"

Mr. Winch said he could understand the feeling that he was exaggerating when he suggested that by the year 2000 all life could cease to exist on the earth.

"But listen to Dr. Barry Commoner, head of the centre of biology in St. Louis," he said. "Dr. Commoner stated publicly just a short time ago that unless we match our technical power with a deeper understanding of the balance of nature, we run the risk of destroying this planet as a suitable place for human habitation.

"He is not the only scientist to issue the warning. Others have stated that the entire world is in grave danger of environmental collapse unless scientists and governments apply themselves to finding ways of controlling the forces which are rapidly making the earth unfit for human habitation."

'PROBLEM IS HERE'

Mr. Winch said the residents of the Island may well feel secure and remote from the pollution problems already creating havoc in major centres throughout the world.

"There is a general feeling that pollution is a problem — but somewhere else," he said. "The problem is here, in the Gulf Islands; the problem belongs in Nanaimo, in Metchosin, in the Cowichan Valley, in Sooke and more particularly in Victoria and in Ottawa those two seats of government to which we look for direction and guidance in time of crisis."

Mr. Winch noted that provincial Health Minister Ralph Loffmark had already promised tough anti-pollution legislation during the next session of the provincial legislature and that the federal government was attempting to establish water quality standards and control for air pollution.

"We are moving, slowly, maybe, but at last in the right direction," he said.

"The task of controlling the folly of man will not be easy," he warned. "For too long we have neglected the growing problem. But we can master it, we must master it, at whatever cost."

EFFORTS of firemen to save child by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation failed at Racine, Wis., Tuesday. Firemen said they found the bodies of brother and sister under a blanket in a bedroom. Both died. The mother ran downstairs to call for help and had to be restrained from re-entering flat. (AP Wirephoto)

Population In Prisons Decreasing

OTTAWA (CP) — A miscalcuation in the early 1960s that federal officials are still trying to account for has left some new penitentiaries less than half full.

With the federal penitentiaries service about half through a 10-year, $120,000,000 construction program:

● There are only 36 prisoners in a special detention prison at Laval, Que., built to hold 150 of the "thouroughly incorrigible." It was opened this year.

● There are only about 35 women in Matsqui, a British Columbia prison opened in 1966 for drug offenders with space for 150 women.

● Only about 170 men occupy the 300-capacity male quarters at Matsqui.

The Commons standing committee on justice also was told Mondy night by Penitentiaries Commissioner Allan J. MacLeod that a staff of 4,800 officers is caring for 6,800 prisoners in some 34 federal penal institutions.

POPULATION DOWN

He said the prison population was 7,600 three years ago and officials expected then it would rise to 8,200 by this year, but instead it has decreased by 800.

"A reduction of 800 means a reduction of two in the number of quite expensive institutions that have to be built," Mr. MacLeod said.

He was testifying during committee examination of the $44,811,000 in penitentiaries service spending estimates for the 1968-69 fiscal year.

Mr. MacLeod told Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) that "our educated guess" places more probation by the courts and parole of inmates among the reasons for the drop in the prison population.

Relatively prosperous times with high employment in Canada and "to some extent" rehabilitation programs within the penal system also were possible factors, he said.

B. P. Benoit, director of financial services for the system, said the per capita cost of keeping 155 prisoners in 450-capacity Matsqui in the 1966-67 fiscal year was $13,000.

It fell to $9,700 in the 1967-68 fiscal year with an average of 237 prisoners.

Mr. Benoit said that at capacity, the per capita cost would be about $5,000.

The figures don't include the capital costs of building Matsqui, developed mainly to handle addicts who get into trouble in British Columbai's Lower Mainland.

He described Matsqui as still an experiment but one which has had "a high proportion of success" among the 178 males and 44 females who have been released.

Mr. MacLeod told John Gilbers (NDP—Toronto Broadview) that about 65 per cent of all prisoners are younger than 25.

A few were as young as 16 and 17, mainly in the Quebec and Atlantic regions.

Iraq Regime on Alert For Any Counter-Coup

By RALPH JOSEPH
CP Correspondent

BAGHDAD (CP) — Four months after assuming power in Baghdad, Iraq's new Baathist regime is cautiously settling down to business. But it continues on the alert against any possible attempt at a counter-coup.

All vehicles approaching Baghdad are thoroughly searched for arms. A bus in which I was travelling from Khaneqin was stopped and searched for arms. At one point it was boarded by a man in civilian clothes with a drawn revolver, held downwards. He glanced over the faces of the passengers, looked searching at one or two, then got off and waved the bus on.

In the city itself the army has more or less faded into the background. This may be a sign that the junta headed by Gen. Ahmed Hassan Bakr now feels reasonably secure.

But it has spent most of the first four months of its existence building up popular support. Priority was given to the freeing of political prisoners detained by former regimes.

Abdullah Salloom Al-Samarra'ee, minister for culture and information, said these numbered more than 350 and had been serving sentences ranging from a few years to life. Many who had already served their terms in jail were still languishing there when the amnesty came.

PUT BACK IN JOBS

Another step was reinstating in their jobs those who had been dismissed for political reasons. A handful of civil servants got their jobs back almost immediately after the coup. Later, in September, Gen. Bakr invited to the presidential palace a large number of others and promised they would be reinstated as of Oct. 1.

The promise was kept and was followed by a subsequent order to the oil companies to follow suit. In the interior ministry alone 276 officials were back at their desks, 257 in the railway administration and 87 in the information ministry.

The Iraq Petroleum Co. took back 250 dismissed personnel and a large number of teachers and other semi-government officials also got back their jobs.

Efforts have been made to win support from the rebellious Kurdish minorities in the north. Despite the reported cynicism of Mullah Mustafa Barzani, the Kurdish leader, towards "military regimes following one another," Bakr has included in his cabinet ministers known to be sympathetic to Mullah Barzani.

TAXES REDUCED

Other conciliatory moves include the decision "in principle" to set up a cigarette factory and a dairy in Arbil, in Kurdish territory. A cement factory in Sulaimaniyah is to be expanded, and the University of Sulaimaniyah, also in Kurdish territory, now is officially reported to be admitting students from that area.

Another popular move was the reduction of taxes and the slashing of prices of some consumer goods produced by the State Organization of Industry.

But the state's liberalism goes to a point and no farther. The press, for instance, is still controlled by the government — newspapers are published under licence. A new law for the press is expected to be published shortly, but meanwhile at least one newspaper that failed to fall in line has been closed down again.

When the new interim constitution was published, reference was made to a future national assembly, but there are no signs yet of an early return to parliamentary life — though this was one of the demands put forward by demonstrators just prior to the July 17 coup.

The highest power in the country is the Revolutionary Command Council, which appoints the president, prime minister and commander-in-chief. All three offices now are invested in Bakr. It is composed of right-wing members of the Baath Arab Socialist party and acts as a parliament in the sense that it performs a legislative function, and to all appearances one-party rule will remain.

National Egg Board Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Nearly unanimous agreement has been achieved on a national egg marketing agency, the federal agriculture department said Tuesday.

However, the proposal still has to be discussed with 175,000 egg producers. Ontario egg producers voted down a proposal for a provincial egg marketing board earlier this year.

Federal and provincial agriculture ministers and deputy ministers Monday and Tuesday agreed on the need for a national agency to foster a strong, efficient poultry industry, to provide a stable and reasonable returns to producers and to provide a dependable supply of eggs to consumers at stable prices.

Allocation of quotas, whether provincial, regional or national, would be limited to production facilities established before the end of November, 1968.

$2 Million Estate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Tracy left an estate worth more than $2,000,000 to his wife of 30 years, Helen. The will of the late actor, who died of cancer last Oct. 18 at age 70, was filed for probate in Superior Court.

Quebec, Ottawa Quietly Discuss The Gabon Affair

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Ottawa and Quebec are negotiating discreetly the issue of representation at this year's sequel to the Gabon conference which Quebec attended on the footing of a soverieign state, leading to a suspension of Canadian relations with Gabon and a stormy period in Ottawa-Quebec relations.

The annual conference of education minister of France and her former colonies in Africa is to be held in mid-December, in Niamey, capital of Niger.

At the last such conference, in Gabon, in January, Quebec attended under its own flag, over the objections of the federal government which had proposed that the Quebec minister of education lead a Canadian delegation that would include representatives of other provinces. A second session of the conference, held later in Paris, was also attended by a purely Quebec delegation.

DIDN'T REPLY

Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal said then that the province had created "an important precedent" toward achieving its goal of a recongized role in international affairs.

But in contrast to the public argument between federal and provincial governments, Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson did not reply to a series of letters from Lester Pearson, then prime minister, proposing that Mr. Cardinal head a Canadian delegation.

This time there has been extreme discretion in both provincial and federal capitals.

But Claude Morin, deputy minister of Quebec's intergovernmental affairs department and the architect of the province's plans for a role in international affairs, slipped into Ottawa aboard the Quebec government's DH-125 jet to discuss the issue with federal officials.

There was speculation here Tuesday that Sen. Paul Martin, former minister of external affairs, would visit Niger while on a visit to Africa to attend ceremonies marking the fifth anniversary of Ruanda University, founded with substantial Canadian aid and headed by a Canadian, Rev. Georges-Henri Levesque.

A reply given by Prime Minister Trudeau during the Commons question period Monday tended to confirm speculation that the Canadian government had received an invitation to the conference.

MISLEADING WORD

Asked if Canada had informed the government of Niger of any intention it might have to attend the conference, Mr. Trudeau said he expected a "reply" could go out this week.

Government sources suggested later, however, that the use of the world "reply" had been midleading and should not be taken to mean that there had been an invitation to which Canada would reply.

One reason for the discretion by both federal and provincial governments so far is the byelection in which the Quebec education minister is a candidate. Mr. Cardinal is seeking election in the late Premier Johnson's riding of Bagot Dec. 4.

He has a hard fight against a strong Liberal candidate and might lose votes either by compromising his formerly strong nationalistic stand on Quebec's role in international affairs or, on the contrary, by getting into a fight with Ottawa that would intend to conform opposition charges that he is more concerned with Qubec's role abroad than with the local interests of province and riding.

Players To Promote Coffee

A new coffee house will open soon on the University of Victoria campus.

The Players Club, started by a theatrical group of the same name, will be a coffee house with a difference, organizers say.

Due to debut in January, the club will be built with volunteer labor and be open Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, with entertainment such as singing, modern dance and drama.

"You could describe the club as having a non-depressive atmosphere," said spokesman Denis Johnston.

He spoke on behalf of the new establishment when he appeared at the Sunday night representative assembly meeting that approved a $1,700 loan toward construction costs of the club.

The theatre division is putting up another $2,600.

The AMS loan will be repaid through money raised from a fashion show and a drama festival.

World Cults Lecture Topic

No Christian of integrity can now claim to be "the sole possessor of religious truth," says Rev. Leslie Wallwork, minister of Cordava Bay and Gordon Head United churches.

Mr. Wallwork will discuss the wisdom of Hinduism, Buddhism and other non-Christian religions at a series of public meetings starting in Gordon Head United Church tonight at 7:30.

"This is one world with one God," the minister said today, "and, if we on this earth learn to understand and live with each other, we must try to understand our neighbor's deepest beliefs."

At Wednesday's meeting, Mr. Wallwork will introduce his subject with a talk on The Birth of Religion. Further meetings will follow on Dec. 5, 12 and 19 at 7:30 p.m.

They are sponsored by Cordova Bay-Gordon Head pastoral charge of the United Church of Canada.

"If there is sufficient interest in the subject of world religions, we shall continue these meetings in the New Year," Mr. Wallwork said.

Grant Helps Centre For Artists

The Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria is one of 25 B.C. groups sharing $21,000 in new grants by the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation.

The council's $500 grant will go toward the setting up of a creative centre for artists in Victoria.

The University of Victoria's School of Fine Arts was given $3,000 to restore a 19th century chamber organ discovered at the Maltwood Art Museum.

And a $300 grant was made to the Vancouver and Victoria centres of the Royal Canadian College of Organists to assist the 1969 Diamond Jubilee National Convention.

The Arts Council of the Nanaimo Regional District received $500 to promote a fall festival of the arts.

Koerner Foundation grants are used to support projects in the fields of the cultural and creative arts, health and welfare and higher education.

Killings in Cambodia

HONG KONG (Reuters) — North Vietnam has accused American and South Vietnamese forces of intruding into Cambodian territory and killing or injuring 67 civilians, the North Vietnam news agency said Wednesday. The North Vietnamese foreign ministry said the incursions occurred between Nov. 6 and 16.

Churches to Unite For Poverty Attack

TORONTO (CP) — A joint eight-member committee of Roman Catholic and Protestant churchmen will be named next week to draw up plans for a unified attack on poverty by Canada's churches.

The decision to set up the committee was made Tuesday at a meeting of 62 churchmen sponsored jointly by the Canadian Council of Churches and the Canadian Catholic Conference of Bishops. The committee will have until May, 1969, to produce a plan of action.

The meeting was a follow-up to a four-day conference on poverty sponsored by the churches last May in Montreal.

Among the Catholic delegates were: Maurice Cardinal Roy, Archbishop of Quebec City and primate of Canada; Most Rev. Alexander Carter of Toronto, president of the Catholic bishops conference; and Most Rev. Philip Pocock, coadjutor archbishop of Toronto.

The protestant delegation included: Rev. Floyd Honey, general secretary of the council of churches; Canon David Somerville, bishop-elect of New Westminster, B.C., and director of program for the General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada; Rev. L. H. Fowler, secretary of the administrative council of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Rev. Earl Treusch, general secretary of the Lutheran Council in Canada.

Rev. John Leng, director of the division of congregational life and work of the United Church of Canada; Joseph Arthurs, president of the Baptist Federation of Canada; Frank Moulton, staff secretary of the Salvation Army, and Fred Haslam, general secretary of the Society of Friends.

ATTEND OPENING NIGHT OF 'THE DESERT SONG'

Glue-Sniffers Need Fast Help

OTTAWA (CP) — Parents who catch their children sniffing glue, nail-polish remover or similar substances should get professional help fast, says Dr. A. C. Hardman, deputy director-general of the federal food and drug directorate.

It is no good to punish or just warn the child, Dr. Hardman said. You must get to the root of the problem.

Quick-drying airplane glue, polish remover and many other common household substances such as paint thinner and even gasoline oil contain ingredients that can kill if inhaled in large-enough doses.

Children aged 8 to 17 are the most common sniffers, Dr. Hardman said. The average age is 14.

Parents should watch for symptoms of a change in scholastic standing, bizarre behavior and the odor of acetone in a child's hair or clothing.

DOSES MUST INCREASE

The child who is "stuck on glue" is likely to become paranoid, isolated in his relations with others and finally psychologically hooked.

Most dangerous, Dr. Hardman said, the child will develop a tolerance for whatever he is using that will drive him to seek larger and larger doses.

Common solvents such as toluene, benzene and acetone are the active ingredients in glues and thinners.

They have an extremely low boiling point, which makes them highly gaseous at room temperature.

They will not dissolve readily in water but do dissolve well in fats. This is the danger.

The brain and nerve tissues of the human body contain a high proportion of fat-like substances.

Dr. Hardman said the inhaled solvents work on the body in the same way as alcohol and common anesthetics. Thus, the heavy sniffer gradually becomes anesthetized.

TAKES GREAT RISK

The common causes of death documented in sniffing cases are a direct form of asphyxia, he said.

Either the sniffer will suffocate after falling unconscious with a plastic bag over his face, or he may vomit due to the effects of the solvent and choke on vomited food.

Either way, the young person who decides to try sniffing just once for thrills is taking a terrible chance, Dr. Hardman said.

Seeking the experience of being "high," the person will feel dizzy, drunk and may become impulsive, aggressive and have visual and auditory distortions. the feeling may last from 15 minutes to several hours.

Dr. Hardman said research indicates that the child who keeps on sniffing repeatedly usually has a personality defect.

One sniffer had actually told a Toronto doctor that glue was his only friend.

Speaker Outlines Legislation Designed to Protect Consumer

H. Melvin Smith gave the Victoria Branch of the Consumers Association of Canada a rundown of the continuing attempts of the government to do more for the consumer when he met with them Monday in the small dining room of Eaton's.

The assistant solicitor-general from the office of the Attorney-General centred his talk around the Consumer Protection Act that went into force last January.

He noted that the Queen's Printer had reported that no other piece of legislation had been in such demand and outlined the steps taken by the government to acquaint the public with its contents.

He also told the meeting that consumers have been asserting their rights under the legislation. "A legislation should be simple enough for the consumer to obtain his rights without having a government official standing over his shoulder," he said.

He then outlined the six main provisions of the act.

The first is disclosure of the cost of borrowing and credit buying, both in terms of the annual cost rate and in a dollars and cents figure prior to the transaction taking place. He then outlined the specific points that must be disclosed on first a loan and then a credit deal.

This practice, which is now law although many reputable firms made this policy before the legislation came through, enables the consumer to "shop" for credit as he would for goods.

The second provision deals with itinerant sellers. The speaker outlined the details that must be revealed in the contract and the right of the consumer to cancel the contract within three days.

The third provision deals with advertising credit terms. Advertisements, he told the meeting, must give both the cash price and how long credit payments will last so that the consumer may calculate credit charges.

The fourth provision deals with prepayment of interest in case of early payment. Rules determining the amount of rebate are written into the legislation.

Unconscionable credit rates come under the fifth main provision. This enables the court to rewrite a contract if the terms in the original contract are unconscionable. Later he told the group that the consumer must prosecute in this situation although under other provisions the government will prosecute.

The sixth provision dealt with the remedies allowed for in the act in the case of a credit grantor who doesn't follow the rules laid out in the legislation. The first kind of provision is penal and results in charges being laid and the creditor being fined or even jailed.

The second provision covers civil remedies that the consumer himself can invoke.

Mr. Smith then outlined some of the abuses of the act to date.

He also touched on consumer abuses that are not yet covered by legislation. He was unable to disclose what the government plans to do in these areas, some of which come under federal rather than provincial jurisdiction, but expressed confidence that something would be done. Among the practices he hopes to see controlled are referral selling, use of promissory notes, cut-off clauses and sieze or sue practices.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. E. Fairhurst and thanked by Mrs. J. Mace.

Official Visitor

Mrs. Mable Cross, provincial president of the Ladies' Auxiliaries to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, will pay an official visit to Victoria Auxiliary No. 12 on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Eagles Hall, 751 View Street.

The auxiliary will be holding its Christmas Party Night. Gifts will be exchanged. A pot-luck supper will be served.

Members are asked to bring their penny bags. These provide funds to buy hampers for the needy.

PERSONAL INTEREST

At Uplands Golf Club

The Certified General Accountants' Association will hold its annual dinner dance at the Uplands Golf Club on Friday, December 6 at 7 p.m. Among the expected 80 guests will be Mr. Lyle Beard of Vancouver, the CGA's provincial president; Mr. Noel Smith of that city, the group's secretary and registrar, and Mr. Gerald Martins, chairman of the Vancouver chapter.

In San Francisco

Victorians who have visited British Columbia House in San Francisco recently include Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Courtney Haddock, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Woolliams, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Melville, Mr. and Mrs. R. Schuitema, Mrs. M. L. Todd, Mr. S. E. Soward and Mr. J. Rhodes.

Welcome Home Party

Mrs. June Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. P. Chaworth-Musters entertained Saturday evening at Mrs. Taylor's home on St. Charles Street in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Raith Sykes, who have just returned to Victoria. They left in September, 1966, in their 40-foot cutter Escapee for New Zealand, and from there they travelled to England by freighter. They are now on their way back to New Zealand via Victoria. Among guests at the party were Mrs. Sykes' mother, Mrs. Charles King, and her aunt, Mrs. H. M. Newson. A number of guests also attended from Duncan to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Sykes.

Lines Around the Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin become smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

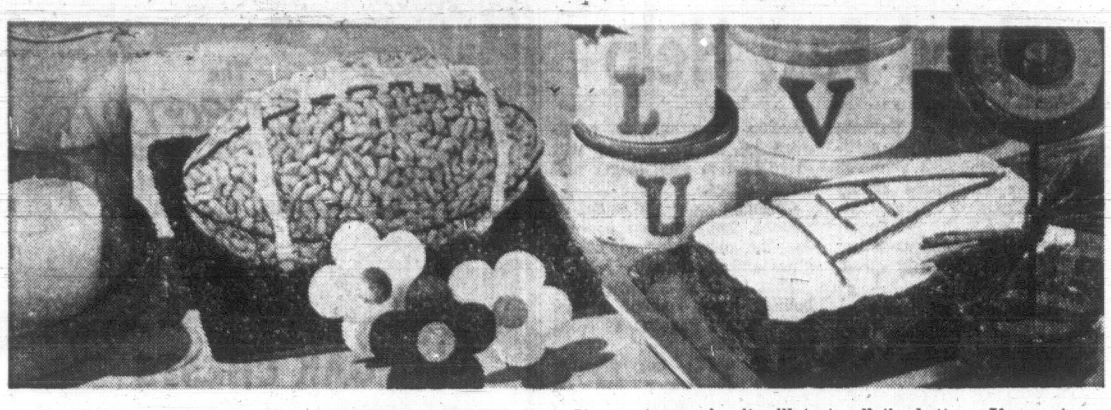
COOKING CAN BE FUN

By MARY MOORE

Grey Cup Parties Are Enhanced With Football Made in Kitchen



You can eat this football and, surprisingly, it is easy to make. Every Grey Cup Day party should have one as a centrepiece to celebrate this exciting Canadian football day.

If your team wins it will taste all the better. If your team loses it will ease the pain.

Why does a food editor receive an invitation to a sports writers' party to meet the B.C. Lions? Because she is a football enthusiast! The beautiful seafood buffet was worth the trip alone but to be introduced to and shake hands with and talk to Jackie Parker was an ingredient that will never be forgotten. Out of football uniform and in a suit he does not look like a football player at all. He is not outsize—simply a gently smiling charmer with a schoolteacherish appearance.

But not on the football field! There he is all business.

Grey Cup fever temperatures are rising and parties are being planned by hopeful hostesses.

Whether your team wins or not the spectators have to be fed. We have a football for you—not pigskin but eminently suitable as a centrepiece for your buffet supper table and deliciously edible.

EAT-THE-FOOTBALL

Football: 6 cups puffed rice, 28 caramels, 1½ cups miniature (or large) marshmallows (packed), 2 tablespoons butter (or margarine), 2 tablespoons water.

Frosting: 2 tablespoons butter (or margarine), 2 cups icing sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled.

To make Football heat the puffed rice on large shallow pan in oven at 350-deg. F. about 10 minutes. Turn into large mixing bowl.

Meanwhile in top of double boiler over boiling water melt and combine stirring, the caramels, marshmallows, butter and water until blended and smooth. (This takes about 20 minutes but at first you do not have to stir constantly.)

Pour over cereal in bowl slowly, stirring until evenly coated. With buttered palms pick up the whole mixture and press firmly into football shape. Keep persisting and forcing grains to adhere.

(NOTE: If your hands are small you may have to make two smaller footballs.) Cool on wax paper until set. If bottom flattens do not worry.

To make Frosting beat butter, icing sugar, salt, milk and vanilla until smooth. Remove a quarter of it to a small bowl. Add melted chocolate to remaining. Pipe chocolate frosting to form seams on football. Pipe reserved white frosting to form lacing and end bands. (You will have leftover frosting but need this amount to operate decorating tube.)

Use as a centrepiece for Grey Cup Buffet Party and slice and serve with coffee for dessert. It is crunchily delicious.

French-Canadian Hat Designer Gravitates Toward Severely-Styled Spring Creations

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal women will be sporting chic, almost severely-styled hats this spring if Michel Robichaud, French-Canadian designer, has anything to say about it.

His collection, consisting mainly of beige, navy and black creations, was shown at a press preview and brought back the fedora, cowboy, Spanish sailor and derby chapeau with simple, almost masculine lines.

Most hats sat squarely on top of the head with brim parallel to eye level. Very few hats were worn at an angle or adorned with frills, flowers or other accessories.

Mr. Robichaud, whose dress and suit creations have made him world-renowned, favors linen, satina and paralac straws in his collection designed for Lennox Hat Manufacturing Co. Ltd.

He uses black patent leather fashioned into a safari-like hat but without the neck wrapping, and contrasts by employing white patent leather with shiny black trim.

Cowboy and fedora hats appeared mostly in beige, sometimes trimmed with a band of orange and cafe-au-lait, or solid mink shade.

Navy straw Spanish sailors were often highlighted with pure white or apple-green trim.

Hair styles in all cases were close to the head, short and smooth with the hat covering almost the entire head leaving only the nape of the neck or an ear exposed.

Slightly more extravagant and a little mischievous was a safari hat in black with purple and white paisley neck scarf hiding hairline and ears.

An utterly feminine note was sounded in the creation of a navy cache-chignon in satina straw adorned with a matching veil trailing down the back. A white rosette at the nape of the neck gathered the veil softly.

Totally chic was a black patent leather derby trimmed with red alligator while a similar style featured python trim.

The cache-chignon, a tiny number which sits on top of the head and resembles the tam, in two cases was fashioned from organza petals of pink and yellow.

All hats were available in prices ranging from $15 to $30.

School Bazaar Profits Higher

An increase of over $200 more than last year's proceeds brought net profits from the View Royal School bazaar to $760, Mrs. Kenneth Fraser, convener, reported.

Added attractions at this year's bazaar were a stall of jewelry and records organized by Grade Seven students of the school, and music by The Computers, a student group, both of which added to the proceeds.

The money will be used for books for the library and school equipment.

Indians Planning Christmas Party

The Ladies' Groups of the Songhees and Esquimalt bands are trying something new this year.

They want to hold a Christmas party for the children of the two reservations.

The party will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 17, in the new longhouse on the Esquimalt reserve. An invitation has been sent to Santa Claus and the men are keeping their eyes peeled for a large tree.

Between 90 and 120 children are expected to attend the event and the conveners would welcome donations of toys, ornaments, or food items. Cash donations will also be accepted.

For further information on pickup or delivery of donations, call Mrs. M. Hupse, 479-7391.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Age Old Problem—Unfaithful Husband

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have an age old problem. An unfaithful husband. I've long suspected the he and the woman he has been transporting to and from work were more than "friends," so I started to watch him more closely. I followed him one night when he said he was going to visit his mother, and he went to her place.

We had a showdown and they confessed they were "in love." I threatened to tell their employer if they didn't stop seeing each other. They promised they would, but I think they're lying.

I am 42, have three children and I doubt if I can just "forgive and forget." Besides, I haven't worked in 16 years and he represents security to me.

I'll never be able to trust him again, and I'm sick of putting up a front for our friends. Should I divorce him and start over again at my age?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Confusion is a temporary state, divorce a permanent one. I wouldn't advise anyone to make a permanent move while in a temporary state. Evaluate this situation with your husband when you both have your wits about you and are less emotional and more objective. You can always divorce him. What's the hurry?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old man who is tired of the bachelor life, all my friends are married and I would sincerely like to find a wife. I have a lot to offer as I am good-looking (so I'm told), own my own business, and I don't have any bad habits I couldn't break if I wanted to.

The problem seems to be that the minute a woman shows any serious interest in me, I back off. I like a challenge! It is said that the "fruit at the top of the tree is sweetest." Why is this so? And why must I insist on the unreachable?

STILL SINGLE

DEAR STILL: The fruit at the top of the tree isn't any sweeter than the fruit within your reach, you only imagine it is. The truth of the matter is that you probably don't really want the fruit. You just enjoy reaching for it.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I quit my job as an aide in a hospital to go home with a 90-year-old man who wasn't supposed to live much longer. He has one old maid sister who is his only living relative, and she is 88.

This old man has a lot of money, and I was told by his sister that if I went home from the hospital with him and stayed there until he died, I would get $5,000 in cash, and he would leave his house to me.

Well, this old man's health seems to be getting better all the time, but I don't feel so good lately. I am a poor old lady 63 years of age and I quit my hospital job to come here to work for room and board and $20 a week. Now his sister tells me if I don't feel up to working, they will replace me with a male nurse. What about the promises?

MYRTLE

DEAR MYRTLE: If you have nothing in writing, you need a lawyer. If you can't afford one, seek help at your local Legal Aid society.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from the 19-year-old virgin. It gave me great strength because I am an 18-year-old virgin. I am a Negro freshman in college who was about to be convinced by my "fella" that virgins don't exist anymore, especially Negroes.

I realize now that it doesn't matter what color you are, you should go by your own high standards.

I am truly convinced that when the right guy comes along, the "right" place to say "yes" will be in church, and the "right" time will be on my wedding night.

Thanks so much for all the guidance you have given me and many others. Sincerely,

FIGHTING FRESHMAN

SHOPPING GUIDE

Low Priced Gifts Fit Young Budgets

By PENNY SAVER

Yesterday's column talked about a few of the extra-special gifts that are available for the woman who has everything. Today I would like to take a look at gifts a child can give to his parents. As my consultant on this shopping trip I took Robert, eight, who lives just down the street. Rob is on a very precarious budget. If he "borrows" his mother's wrapping paper he may have $1.50 for each gift he wants to buy. If he buys his own paper, and he wants to be as independent in this matter as he can manage, he has much less. We agreed that a super gift that cost less would be just as good as one that stretched his budget to the breaking point. With this and the sticky sales tax that eats up pennies in mind we sallied forth.

It was Rob who made the first find of the day. He discovered a display of what, to me, looked like a tiny set of shelves. It was in fact a stand for holding drill bits. The holes were in three rows and ranged from ½ (I assume this is in inches, but now knowing much about drills I won't stick my neck out) to 1-16. From the number of holes I would think that every size of drill bit in between must have a place. All the holes are marked with the size of the bit it will hold. The stand itself is of metal that has been finished in a grey shade. It has three layers, two of which are pierced to hold the bits steady. This is a great workshop organizer, making it easy for the handyman to choose the correct drill bit or to see which ones he needs to replace. Best of all, this item is 98 cents—exactly the sort of price a child will be able to pay.

Cutting Board Sale

Not to be outdone by an eight-year-old, I discovered a gift for mothers. Mothers always need cutting boards unless they want cut and scratched table and counter tops. The boards I found are plywood topped with arborite. They are approximately 14 by 16 inches and are available in a variety of patterns and colors. Rob was able to point out to me the one that matched his mother's counters perfectly and we found a few more to match various kitchens in the neighborhood. These boards regularly sell for $1.39 but, filled with the Christmas spirit, the retailer is holding a sale on this item. He bought what he hopes is enough stock to last until Christmas and until that time is selling these boards at 98 cents each.

The average wife doesn't know what to buy for her handyman husband because often she doesn't know one tool from another. I found a saw however that a wife can buy with confidence. This saw, which sells for $9.98, has very hard teeth. While he didn't recommend trying it, the salesman told me that this saw could even saw through nails, so it will do for any average household repairs. It will keep its edge three times longer than most saws and will need no resharpening. The grip on this saw is of durable plastic. It is made by a Swedish company.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where Rob and I shopped for these gift ideas.

Perfumed Candles Part Of Bazaar's Inventory

Decorative items such as perfumed candles will be featured when the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded holds its annual Christmas tea and bazaar this coming Saturday, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at 1450 Elford Street.

Other specialties will be hand-crafted articles made by young adults attending the centre, including hand-hooked rugs, polished driftwood pieces, sewing, and King Alfred cakes.

The Auxiliary to the Adult Services is in charge of arrangements for the sale. There will also be stalls of home baking, sewing, attic treasures, and a lucky seven draw.

Be Smart

The wide, wide pants are big, big fashion this fall and winter. The swinging pleated pant (with brocade vest for evening wear), flared elephant leg, wide, straight leg, cuffed or plain, vested, jacketed in plaids, checks, tweeds and men's wear.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Very fine hair can test a woman's patience and good disposition. This type is very trying because it has little body. Therefore, many hair styles are not in the realm of possibility without extra hair pieces.

Lowman

There is some difficulty even if fine hair is very thick, and if it is somewhat thin, the situation is much worse. There are, however, some measures which will be helpful. For instance, use a plain castile shampoo. Avoid cream shampoos and cream rinses. Dust and dirt make the hair heavier and take the bounce out of it. Therefore, if you have fine hair, shampoo it at least once a week. Twice is better unless your tresses and scalp are very dry. If your hair is fine, but very oily, shampoo it several times a week.

Also, as I have often reported, a beer rinse gives your hair body. The can of beer should be opened the day before your shampoo and then used before setting just like any other rinse. A regular rinse will add some body since it coats each hair. Permanent coloring will help some too, but I think the beer rinse is especially effective.

The cut of your hair is important. Ask that it be given a blunt-end cut. Also, have it cut fairly short. This makes fine, thin hair appear thicker. Do not wear a part. This will be too wide if your tresses are thin.

A permanent will add body to your hair. A so-called "body" permanent is excellent for this type since it gives body without curls. Very fine hair has a tendency to frizzle when given a permanent. The ends of your hair are often left out of the curl during a permanent for this reason.

If your hair and scalp are normal, daily brushing and scalp massage promote a lovely topknot. However, if your hair is thinning, dermatologists warn against brushing any more than absolutely necessary. They also suggest the scalp be treated gently during a shampoo.

Scalp massage is allowed if it is done correctly. This means that the spread fingers move the scalp in little rotary motions, not that the hands be rubbed over the scalp. For thinning hair skin specialists often prescribe a lotion which stimulates circulation in the scalp.

The following exercise is reducing to your abdomen and also speeds circulation to your scalp. Lie, head down, on a slant board. If you do not have a slant board use an ironing board with one end on the seat of a chair. Hold onto the sides of the board as you bend your left leg up toward your abdomen. Straighten your leg toward the ceiling and lower to the board with a stiff knee. Do the same with your right leg and continue, alternating.

Female Lures

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The pesky sawfly may be about to be done in by the female of the species. A chemical produced by virgin female sawflies is so powerful that one ten-thousandth of a microgram can interest thousands of male sawflies. Researchers at the University of Wisconsin hope to use the chemical to attract the males and destroy them.

Type of Lining Based On Style and Weight

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer'

I am making a wedding dress for my daughter and she has informed me that the ready-made dresses she has tried on in the stores were lined with the non-woven kind of fabric. This seems so stiff to me that I am wondering if the press-on interfacing wouldn't be better. Please help us because we really want the gown to look professional. —MRS. L.S.O.

Dear Mrs. L.S.O.: The kind of lining and underlining you use will always depend on two things, the style of the gown and the weight of the fabric. For a shaped look such as the A-line, a heavier underlining is necessary.

I would say that gowns that have this line should be underlined with a fairly stiff woven or unwoven fabric. Many times the gown will be underlined in a medium weight fabric and then a second and firmer weight fabric is used in the lower section of the skirt so that it will stand out and not become limp.

The makers of the press-on interfacing do not recommend it for use in large areas.

Dear Eunice Famer,

I have learned how to lower bust line darts with your help, but now have a new kind of pattern where there is a construction seam over the bust line and a very small dart extending from the seam. How will I know just where this dart should be placed for the best fit and appearance? —MRS. J.N.M.

Dear Mrs. J.N.M.: I'm glad you brought this up because I have stressed the correct fitting of bust line darts many times, but this is a different kind of dart.

When you have a construction seam at the side front, it will be a curved one, which is actually a concealed shaping and has the same effect as if there were regular darts. The very short dart that usually appears from this kind of seam is placed at an angle and is used for a youthful look rather than for a fitted shaping.

This kind of dart should be slightly above the bust and not below it as other darts are placed. However, if you usually lower your darts this kind of dart will also have to be lowered the same amount. It is usually not the best design for a woman who is full-busted.

Pilots Beat Import Change

LONDON (AP) — A fleet of 31 light aircraft touched down in a hurry Tuesday and beat Britain's deadline for import controls by minutes.

The planes were American-designed Gessnas made under licence at Rheims in France. Some flew in with only basic instruments and no radio aids to navigation.

Had they missed the deadline the importers would have had to deposit £125,000 — half their total value—with the government. This system was one of the measures imposed during last week's world monetary crisis.

Thirty landed safely at airports in southern England. The 31st ran out of fuel and made a safe forced landing in a field 20 miles north of London.

WOMAN TO HIGH COURT IN BANK THEFT CHARGE

PENTICTON (CP) — A woman charged following the theft of $492,000 from the Penticton branch of the Royal Bank of Canada was committed Tuesday to higher court trial.

Frances Bambi Shubin, 41, of nearby Naramata, is charged with unlawful possession of over $50, knowing it to have been obtained by commission of an indictable offence. Period covered by the charge is from Sept. 30, 1963, to Sept. 24, 1968, the day she was arrested.

Crown Counsel Brian Waddell said after the preliminary hearing before Magistrate G. S. Denroche that the woman likely would be tried in January before County Court Judge A. D. C. Washington.

Miss Shubin had earlier elected trial by judge alone.

Teachers Favor Pay Talks

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—New Westminster elementary school teachers voted Tuesday to resume contract negotiations with the school board provided some trustees attend sessions.

Since last Wednesday the 120 teachers have been working to rule — refusing to supervise lunch hours or engage in extra-curricular activities—because the board hired a lawyer as a negotiator.

Mary Caple, president of the teachers' association, said:

"There are indications that the board is willing to change its instructions to its agent with regard to certain aspects of the contract."

However, she said, the work-to-rule would continue until settlement is reached and "it now appears that all Christmas pageants and concerts in elementary schools will not take place."

'Smaller Lots Save Money'

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A suggestion that a local urban renewal project could have been built for $2,000,000 less if houses were placed closer together received little sympathy in this fire-conscious city Tuesday.

Robert Campeau, a member of the federal task force on housing, said the saving would have resulted if the $4,400,000 Blackhead Road scheme put 20 instead of 10 houses on an acre of land.

Mr. Campeau, who heads an Ottawa construction firm, said building lots, some as wide as 70 feet, in St. John's are too large. Beautiful homes could be built on lots with 40-foot fronts.

Only the Newfoundland Association of Architects agreed fully with Mr. Campeau. Others argued that a home built to Central Mortgage and Housing specifications would be a fire hazard on a small lot.

This city was levelled twice by fire—June 9, 1846, and July 8, 1862.

Three persons lost their lives in the first blaze. Damage was estimated at $4,000,000.

The second destroyed 1,400 houses, leaving 11,000 persons homeless, and 300 ships. Damage was estimated at $15,800,000.

Deputy Mayor James Fagan, presenting the council's brief, said he believed expropriation among other things was driving up the cost of the Blackhead Road project.

The task force, headed by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, heard briefs from provincial and civic governments, architects and teachers.

The architects said construction of row houses is not the answer to reducing housing costs. An alternative may lie in prefabricated housing.

The St. John's Homebuilders Association said factory-built homes should compete with conventional homes on an even footing.

Mr. Hellyer said task force members have been working "cruel hours" so that there will be a report in the hands of the federal government by the end of this year, "in time to have some effect on the housing needs of the country next year."

'Hope Money Never Changes Me'

NEW YORK (AP) — "I hope all this money never changes me," said Mrs. Lillian C. Brown, 54, after learning that she and her husband, Clemens, had won the New York state lottery superprize of $250,000.

Both Brown and his wife cried for joy Tuesday after their winning ticket was drawn from among 15 finalists.

The Browns, of Belford, N.J., have been married for 35 years. They have nine children, all but one married. They have 18 grandchildren.

Brown, who works as a platform man at a trucking firm, said he plans to keep his $140-a-week job.

But Mrs. Brown, who has two part-time jobs that net $50 a week, said she would be quitting both.

"I'm so overtired from my last 21 years of work, I want to relax," she said.

The Browns will get their $250,000 prize in 10 annual installments.

The lottery has grossed almost $80,000,000 since it was started in June, 1967. Fifty-five per cent of the gross receipts are allocated for education.

TURNING night to day lights burn through the night at busy new Vancouver International Airport, seen in dramatic time exposure photograph taken from the approach road. Military Training Starts at 10

MOSCOW (AP) — Military training in the Soviet Union now starts at the age of 10.

Schoolboys throughout the country are organized into squads, detachments and battalions. Under adult commanders they practice drill, firing, the use of gas masks, other military skills and rendering medical aid.

The program introduced by the Kremlin leadership is being widened this year. Marshal Ivan Bagramyan, who is in charge, this month ordered Pioneer units which had not taken part before to do so in 1968-69.

Soviet children from 10 to 15 belong to the Pioneer organization, which provides group activities and Communist indoctrination.

Older boys get more sophisticated military training the last two years before being drafted in 1967, also reducing the draft at 18. The Kremlin decreed this age one year.

The defence minister, Marshal Andrei Grechko, explained that the Soviet Union was "taking all steps necessary to strengthen its defences."

Canada Welcome OAS Chief Says

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Organization of American States "would welcome Canada warmly but the decision to apply for membership rests with the Canadian government," Secretary-General Galo Plaza said today.

"Canada may at some time decide to become a full participant in the shaping of inter-American policies," Plaza said on his first visit to Canada since becoming the top official of the 22-member OAS earlier this year.

PM REJECTS RADIO BID BY QUEBEC

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

Ottawa — Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday brushed off Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's demand that the province be issued broadcasting licences for educational radio and television.

Mr. Bertrand said Monday in Hull, Que., that Quebec "could not accept" federal policy which is to leave control of planning and production of educational broadcasts to the provinces but to oppose issuing them licences for broadcasting stations.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) asked during the the Commons question period whether in view of Mr. Bertrand's statement the federal government would agree to broadcasting licences being issued to provinces that wanted them for their own educational networks.

Mr. Trueeau replied that the federal government would "apply the constitution which gives the federal government jurisdiction over the airwaves."

In reply to further questioning by Mr. Asselin, Mr. Trudeau indicated that the specific issue of broadcasting would not be on the agenda of next month's federal provincial constitutional conference but could be raised by the provinces, if they wanted to raise it, under the heading of federal-provincial division of powers.

Ease Laws On Marijuana U.K. Urged

LONDON (AP) — A British government committee says smoking marijuana is not a serious crime and penalties should be reduced, the London Daily Mail reports.

The committee's recommendations are being studied by Home Secretary James Callaghan. They are reported to have caused disputes among home office officials and police chiefs.

A home office spokesman confirmed that a committee led by 71-year-old Baroness Wootton, a magistrate for 43 years, was studying the effects of narcotics. But he declined to confirm whether the committee had called for easing laws on marijuana.

The Mail says the committee advised that moderate smoking of the drug was a minor infringement of the law and the present maximum sentence of 10 years in jail and a £1,000 fine should be made less severe.

But the committee urged stiffer penalties against selling marijuana, the newspaper says. The present maximum sentence for "pushing" is 10 years in jail. The committee asked for additional unlimited fines, the Mail says.

The maximum sentence for smoking marijuana in Britain is hardly ever administered. Courts usually impose only a fine.

Pill Creator Says Rhythm Unnatural

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. John Rock, the Roman Catholic physician who helped develop the first birth control pill, said Tuesday that rhythm is an "unnatural method of birth control" and should be abandoned.

"Forced continence has no place whatsoever in a happy marriage," he said in contending that the biological regulation provided by oral contraceptives is a natural means of birth control.

"I'm sorry now that years ago I wrote a paper on rhythm," he told a convention of insurance agents.

"But even then I did say it was applicable to only a very small proportion of married people and even then it had to be applied very carefully. I think now, with better methods, rhythm has fallen into the area where we put the concept that the earth was flat or that the sun moved around the earth."

The official teaching of the Roman Catholic Church considers rhythm the only acceptable means of birth control.

CORNER OF YATES AND DOUGLAS STREETS

ANDY COCHRANE

Outstanding Achievement His Goal

By ELIZABETH FORBES

He's tall and slight and wears a neatly clipped dark brown beard.

His name is Andy Cochrane.

He is project architect for the provincial museum-archives-workshop complex now nearing completion, and his immediate boss, deputy minister of public works Arnold Webb tells you Andy is dedicated to seeing it emerge as an outstanding achievement.

Forbes

During a tour of the complex with him I learned something of how an architect makes such an ambitious project come to life.

First there was a series of visits, with heads of the provincial archives, museum, mechanical and lighting departments, to other museums and archives in the United States and Canada.

★ ★ ★

They were all outstanding but, in most instances, they were build a long time ago. And like some of our old homes, they were elegant but lacking in modern services.

The architect came home determined such services would be included in plans for the Victoria complex.

In the museum, open now for several months, escalators take you to all floors. There's a sound system complete with lots of earphones for easy listening to recorded talks on various exhibits.

Comfortable seats and benches are placed at strategic points. Many have earphones attached, and, on all three floors, there are lounge areas where visitors can relax and rest.

When the adjoining archives is completed next year, it will have many of the same services.

★ ★ ★

The seven-storey workshop behind the archives is planned mainly for storage space and restoration work. "A museum and archives is 60 per cent storage and restoration and 40 per cent exhibits," said Mr. Cochrane.

Standing on the wide promenade in front of the main entrance to the museum, we looked down at a sunken water garden being shaped between the archives and the carillon tower and over it to the green lawns of the Legislative Buildings.

This long-range vista is no accidental happening.

"We planned the complex to include that view," the architect said with understandable pride.

The buildings, he said, are individual but, at the same time, they complement each other. Lines co-ordinate and yet create their own theme. The over-all admits space and air and light. Also a feeling of relaxation and easy viewing.

★ ★ ★

This has been accomplished, in part, by use of different levels, the opening of a breezeway at the Belleville Street end of the museum with mammoth outdoor showcases and the exact placing of the buildings themselves and the carillon tower.

The sunken water garden, also another tiered garden planned to feature rocks from various places in British Columbia, and still another on an upper level, where native ferns and plants will be displayed, add to the feeling of space.

Use of Nelson Island granite and sandstone (as in the Legislative Buildings) give the atmosphere of co-ordination.

As we made a quick tour of the museum itself, the architect was quick to tell me that once the building was completed the museum staff took over to set up exhibits and dioramas.

At the same time he pointed to a mezzanine, lecture rooms and an auditorium that were all part of his ambitious dream.

★ ★ ★

And, on the second and third floors, glassed-in balconies "that some day may have miniature displays along the solid walls that separate them from the main exhibit areas."

By then I knew that Andy Cochrane was born in Newfoundland. He grew up there. And I couldn't help wondering how he became interested in Victoria and why he was so dedicated to making this complex an outstanding achievement.

When we reached the third floor where the human history of British Columbia is presented I got my answer.

We paused before a display of bottles, mortars and pestles used by early chemists.

"These belonged to my grandfather," he said quietly.

That grandfather was John Cochrane, druggist and chemist in this city around the turn of the century.

His place was at the northwest corner of Douglas and Yates. It was familiarly known to all and sundry as Cochrane's Corner.

Iran Leaps Forward—Awkwardly

By EDWIN LEANE
The London Observer

TEHERAN — Iran's industrial leap forward is thrusting this ancient nation into the ranks of the developed countries. Foreign entrepreneurs who formerly treated investment proposals with cynicism now line up with cheque books ready.

The West Germans, for example, who declined some years ago to participate in Iran's first steel mill project, are pouring in immense amounts of money. So anxious are they not to miss an investment opportunity, they have set up an information-gathering bureau in Teheran to keep watch on economic developments.

There are indications, however, that Iran's spectacular economic growth has something of a cancerous quality about it. As industry has become king, education—through sheer neglect—has become an unfunny and despised court jester.

The end of Iran's long summer saw the children returning to school. Since it was the beginning of a new academic year, a host of new pupils went along, too. A few days later, many of these children were trudging home again. There was no more room.

PRESS BOMBARDED

To a country basking in the glow of successful literacy corps experiment, it was a traumatic experience. Parents bombarded the press with letters of protest and editorial writers denounced the government's lack of foresight. The former minister of education, Hadi Hedayati, was packed off to the southern city of Shiraz with every prospect of spending the rest of his days in academic isolation as the chancellor of Pahlavi University.

The vacancy was filled by Mrs. Farolhru Parsa, who became Iran's first woman cabinet minister. A tough and able administrator, Mrs. Parsa has already taken the educational system to pieces with the intention of building it up again from scratch, but Iran's educational ills will take a long time to cure.

Crash programs are currently being tried, one of which involves turning the country's schools into virtual education factories. In the oil province of Khuzestan, schools are operating on a shift basis: one group of pupils attends class between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m. followed by another batch between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., with yet a third contingent turning up for lessons between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. Three schools in the province are operating five three-hour shifts.

OBLIGED TO TEACH

How long this situation can be maintained remains to be seen. The director of the local education office, Saeed Dehdashti, says "All the teachers are very co-operative. They know they have to help as much as they can to give all children a chance to attend school."

To help the overworked teachers, the ministry of education ordered more than 1,000 Teheran university students to present themselves at various secondary schools in the capital as part-time teachers. The students are obliged to put in three to six hours' teaching a week.

One encouraging aspect is that the government appreciates that it has a crisis on its hands, and is doing something about it. An educational summit was convened at the Caspian Sea resort town of Ramsar where the groundwork was laid for a full-scale revolution in the school system. The chancellors of all eight universities in Iran had previously resigned in order to clear the way for the reforms, and several of the country's top educators found themselves out of a job in the process.

The Shah himself attended the Ramsar summit meeting, and in Iran that is always a guarantee of action.

Second Firm Unveils Model Of Telephone, TV Satellite

MONTREAL (CP) — RCA Ltd. Tuesday unveiled a full-sized model of a spacecraft which it hopes will fulfill Canada's domestic communications needs.

The unveiling followed Monday's display in Ottawa of another communications satellite model designed by Northern Electric Co. a subsidiary of Bell Canada.

G. Bruce MacKimmie, manager of RCA's space systems, told a press conference the design of the proposed satellite "represents a major step forward in space technology and has been accomplished by RCA's skilled group of Canadian engineers and scientists."

The RCA model consists of a cylindrical housing nearly seven feet tall and about 5½ feet in diameter, with a six-foot-high scoop-shaped antenna mounted atop the cylinder.

TIMED UNVEILING

Both RCA and Northern Electric had been granted federal government contracts to make a six-month study of the proposed communications satellite system that will be best suited to provide television and telephone communications for Canadians.

RCA timed the unveiling of its model to coincide with the opening of the two-day International Aerospace Exposition being held in Montreal.

Mr. MacKimmie said the contract for the study was worth about $274,000 and that the initial proposal would be for two or three cylindrical satellites.

Two would be stationed in a synchronous orbit 22,300 miles above the equator at a longitudial position equal to that of Winnipeg. The third would be kept in reserve.

One satellite would be sufficient to serve as a single relay point to provide total communications service — television and telephone — to virtually every inhabited area of Canada.

The second satellite would be necessary for use at times when the sun is directly over the first satellite, when communications would be interrupted.

The model displayed by RCA would have a communications capability of six simultaneous television channels or thousands of voice circuits. Telephone communications would therefore require the cutting out of at least one of the TV channels.

LAUNCHED IN 1971

The federal government hopes to have the satellites launched in 1971, and the launching would likely be handled by a United States space rocket, possibly from Cape Kennedy.

J. D. Houlding, RCA president, said it would take about three years from now to have the satellite system ready for launching.

The satellite segment is expected to cost about one-third of the anticipated total cost of $100,000,000 for satellites, ground stations and rockets to launch the spacecraft.

The satellites would have an airborne lifespan of five years or more, when new satellites would have to be launched to replace them.

However, before actual production of the satellites can begin, the project must receive federal government approval and this will take place only after a study has been completed and the design selected.

The RCA satellite would weigh about 1,000 pounds before launching, and about 520 pounds after its fuel had been spent during take-off.

Mr. Houlding said RCA has handled contracts for 22 group station projects in 10 countries totalling $24,000,000 since 1959 and another $14,000,000 in contracts on eight space projects since 1961.

Some Play Too For Mod Squad Volunteers

It won't be all work and no play for the Mod Squad.

The hundreds of students working to put the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal over the top will be rewarded on Dec. 7 with a specially scheduled soccer match and a draw for scholarships and radios.

Open only to students who have worked for the United Appeal, the soccer match will feature a clash between the Mount View Hornets and Victoria O'Keefes at Centennial Stadium.

At half-time a draw for two $100 scholarships and two radios provided by local businessmen will be made.

Specialty Has Been Air Transport Field

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto clergyman's son who drafted Canada's post-war civil aviation policy is the new president of Air Canada.

John Russel Baldwin, 56, was named head of the publicly owned airline Tuesday, filling the post vacated nearly six months ago by wartime fighter pilot Gordon R. M. McGregor.

Unlike his predecessor, who spent a career in military and civil aviation, Mr. Baldwin is a long-time inhabitant of the inner circles of government.

A Rhodes scholar who taught history at McMaster University, Hamilton, he was a member of the intellectual battalions assembled in Ottawa during the Second World War to enable the government to do a better job of thinking before it acted. His particular task was service on the joint U.S.-Canada economic committee.

SPECIAL FIELD

Mr. Baldwin, a professorial-looking man with silvery hair and upswept eyebrows above his dark-rimmed glasses, has, since then, made air transport his special field. He even learned to fly.

C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply in the 1940s, got him to make a study of air transport policy. This put him on the path that led to him becoming, in 1954, one of the two deputy transport ministers. He had special responsibility for air services.

Later that year, however, one of the two deputy minister posts was abolished and Mr. Baldwin became the permanent head of the federal government's largest department, a job he held until this move to Air Canada.

The department doubled in size in the next decade, to the point where it had about 15,000 employees, and there was often talk of establishing a separate department for civil aviation. This never happened, but Mr. Baldwin once said "reorganization is bound to come in a department that has grown so difficult to run."

The new Air Canada president speaks French, and also German. His department named a bilingualism director and set up a language school before it became government policy to have these things in all departments.

JUST A MYTH

Mr. Baldwin is a disbeliever in the myth of a civil service "establishment," standing together to dominate the government and set the tone of public affairs.

The public service "is not an organized group that sticks together," he says.

In his free time, he likes jazz, modern art and French wine.

Born in Toronto Aug. 7, 1912, son of the late Rev. J. R. Baldwin, a Baptist minister, he went to public schools in Mount Brydges and Uxbridge, Ont., and then to McMaster.

He got his Bachelor of Arts degree at McMaster in 1933. A year later he took a Master of Arts at the University of Toronto and was named Rhodes scholar for Ontario.

He attended Christ Church College at Oxford University from 1934 to 1937, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Letters from Oxford in 1936.

He taught at McMaster in the 1937-38 academic year, then became national secretary of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. He joined the public service in 1941.

He married Dorothy Pearson of Ottawa in 1944. They have three sons, John Russel, Jr., at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., Brian Richard at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and Blair Christopher, who attends high school in Ottawa.

STORMY PUBLIC DEBATE MARKS U.K. RACE CRISIS

LONDON (AP) — Britain's new Race Relations Act went into effect Monday amid a stormy public debate over the proper way to approach the country's growing race problem.

The act empowers the Race Relations Board to investigate and seek compliance with the law over a wide field of alleged acts of discrimination against Britain's 1,000,000 colored people—two per cent of the population.

Up to now, the board was limited to investigating complaints of discrimination in certain public places. This resulted largely in efforts to conciliate between Asian, West Indian and African immigrants and pub owners who refuse to serve them drinks.

Now the board's investigative powers have been broadened to acts of discrimination in the provision of any goods, facilities or services. This includes housing, hotels, educational institutions, banking, insurance, entertainment, travel and the service of any business, profession, trade or public authority.

Ten days ago, Enoch Powell, a rebellious Conservative opponent of colored immigration, proposed in a speech that Britain rigidly limit the flow of immigrants and set up a government ministry to assist the repatriation of those already here.

He predicted there would be 4,500,000 colored people in Britain by the end of the century, with whole communities becoming predominantly or exclusively Afro-Asian. There would be, he said, "Several Washingtons in England," unless this was done. More than half the population of the U.S. capital is Negro.

"The people of England will not endure it," Powell said. "I do not believe it is in human nature that a country should passively watch the transformation of whole areas which lie at the heart of it into alien territory."

Powell's speech led to a public outcry, but the attorney-general declined to take action under a law prohibiting public acts likely to stir up racial hatred.

Mark Bonham Carter, chairman of the Race Relations Board, said at a news conference Monday race relations in Britain "are much better than you would conclude they were if you only heard the speeches of some politicians." But he said the new act does not allow the board to proceed against politicians or others discussing racial questions because this is in the attorney-general's jurisdiction.

Canada Faces Competition From Countries It Helps

By HENRY HEALD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian agricultural industry may some day be faced with competition in world markets from countries now receiving Canadian food aid.

This was one of the implications of Canadian aid programs for agriculture outlined Tuesday by Dr. Rolland Poirier, assistant deputy minister of agriculture.

Dr. Poirier told the annual federal-provincial agricultural outlook conference that aid programs aimed at building efficient farm operations abroad "may be so successful as to place the developing countries on a really competitive footing in respect to some of our products."

But he added: "The true professional should not be afraid to invite competition."

Other costly effects of aid programs cited by Dr. Poirier were the cost to the taxpayers, the need to draw experts from the Canadian agriculture industry to work overseas and the danger of neglecting priority problems at home by trying "to do too much in too short a time in the agricultural field for developing countries."

However, aid programs have beneficial results for the Canadian agriculture industry.

As long as some countries could not produce enough to feed themselves, surplus Canadian production could be used to advantage.

"I am under the impression that a good plan of action in this field would contribute materially to the solution of some of our present marketing problems."

Young people trained to help solve the problems of agriculture in less-developed countries eventually returned to use their talents in promoting Canadian agriculture.

Technical assistance to developing countries would stand Canada in good stead when those countries reached the stage of trading in world markets.

Discussion of agriculture in bilateral and multilateral aid programs concluded the two-day outlook conference attended by about 200 federal and provincial agriculture department, university, farm organization and diplomatic representatives.

Dr. Poirier said Canadian aid activities began in 1950 with expenditures of about $12,000,000 and had expanded to more than $300,000,000 this year. The government's goal for the early 1970s was one-per-cent of the gross national product, about $800,000,000 a year.

Frank Shefrin, director, marketing and trade services division, federal agriculture department, reported on Canadian participation in multilateral programs—the world food program, Food and Agriculture Organization, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

A. W. Broadbent, New Zealand trade commissioner in Canada, paid tribute to the way Canada handled its aid programs. He said they were designed to aid the less-developed country and not to get rid of domestic surpluses.

Stuart Thiessen, secretary of the National Farmers Union, complained that the NFU has tried unsuccessfully to sell the Canadian international development agency on a plan to use Canadian farmers as technical experts in Africa.

Dr. Poirier said such help would be valuable when specific projects are under way but at present they are only in the development stage.

Midriff Bulge Hits B.C. Fitness Program

VANCOUVER (CP) — Physical education in British Columbia is suffering from midriff bulge.

That's the opinion of Gary Pennington, assistant professor at the University of British Columbia's faculty of education.

His formula for making the physical education program lean and hard is an exercise in community co-ordination.

Now, proper facilities are lacking, teachers are poorly trained and the curriculum is outdated, he said during a recent interview.

Suffering through the whole program are the students in primary and secondary schools who grow up hating "phys ed" and ignoring physical exercises, he said.

The answer lies with the community school concept, Prof. Pennington said. Recreational facilities should be designed for everyone's use, not just for students.

USE FACILITIES

"No wonder taxpayers object to spending thousands of dollars on gymnasiums and other facilities when these are only used in the school year and in the school day."

Citing a project in Flint, Mich., he said the schools become meeting places for all residents of the community. Recreational facilities are in use up to 17 hours a day. In B.C., they are used on an average of 1,400 hours a year.

He said the Flint program was instituted because of rising costs of recreational facilities.

He said he conducted a survey showing that more than 100 rural schools had no indoor recreational program at all.

In many schools where there was a program, the emphasis was placed on team sports, involving the better-than-average athletes and leaving the average student sitting on the sidelines.

Physical education teachers should grade their classes on how much a student accomplishes with his own physical resources—not how good an athlete he is.

GYM RIPPED DOWN

The problem began at the teacher-training level.

"UBC's education faculty's gymnasium was ripped down for a parking lot," he said, adding that 80 per cent of those who enter teacher training already have a negative attitude because of their own poor experience at primary and secondary school levels.

"When most of them hate physical education to begin with, it can be seen why they won't be positive about it when they themselves take up teaching."

Prof. Pennington's complaints were underlined by Mrs. Inge Williams, professor of physical education at UBC, who said girls were usually "short-changed" in physical programs, where emphasis was laid on turning out athletic-oriented girls "rather than graceful, feminine ones."

She suggested that co-educational programs in such sports and tennis, badminton and swimming be developed.

8 CARD OF THANKS

I wish sincerely to thank my friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and for the beautiful floral offerings extended at the death of my beloved father Charles Downham. I especially thank Dr. R. Matico, the Annex staff and the staff of 2A, St. Joseph's Hospital, Rev. W. E. Greenhaigh, the Sands family and staff, Michael Williams Dog and Cat Holiday Inn, the Officers and Members of The Vancouver Island Dog Fanciers Association. The gratitude in my heart cannot be fully expressed to Mrs. Hazel E. Hodson, a longtime friend and teacher, for all her acts of kindness, helpful acts and understanding words and comfort during our respective illnesses and especially during my father's last illness. — Miss Audrey L. Downham.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BRYAN—In loving memory of William Edward Bryan, who passed away Nov. 27, 1963.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by his wife, Beatrice, and sons, Bernard and Hugh.

MOORE — In loving memory of our dear dad and grandfather, Capt. J. J. Moore, who passed away on Nov. 27, 1966.
The sea was rough the course uncharted,
The fog rolled in on the briny foam,
God, the pilot, took the helm,
And gently steered him Home!
—Sadly missed by daughters, Margaret and Vera, their husbands Fred and Cecil and grandson Ross and his wife Lynne.

TOYOTA COROLLA

"THE CLEANEST ECONOMY CAR EITHER SIDE OF THE OCEAN!"

Who wants an economy car that won't get out of its own way and is left behind on the hills? The TOYOTA COROLLA has more power, high top speed and better acceleration than any other car in the 1,100 cc class. And it still gets better than 40 miles on a gallon of regular gas.

2, 3 OR 4 BEDROOMS
This is better than new. The grounds are like a park and the lot is so long you can even offer some of your land for sale to adjacent property owners. Close-in, just by a small park, near schools and shops this is a fine family home. The living room is so restful with W-W and the kitchen is most modern, bright and large. Even the big double-sized range goes with it. Two lovely bedrooms with one leading out a sliding glass door to a wonderful sundeck, all surrounded by a glass wind-break. In the basement is a finished bedroom, plus another improvised sleeping room, making up to 4 bedrooms. But if you wish, one bedroom upstairs is now used as a lovely TV den, and suits a retired couple. Really, Del and I would encourage you to see this. Young couples, let us explain how Crown can take your house in trade on this lovely home. Reduced to $19,500. CROWN REALTY LTD. F. WILLS, 385-8731.

B.C. Artist Prize Winner

TORONTO (CP) — Vancouver artist Iain Baxter and Montreal sculptor Francois Dery are among winners of Canadian Artists '68, a competition with prizes totalling $21,000.

Sponsored by the National Art Exhibition Committee—the Ontario Council for the Arts, the Patrons of Canadian Art, the Ontario Society of Artists and the Art Gallery of Ontario—the competition attracted 1,000 entries.

Sculptors received $3,000 and painters $2,000.

PTA to Review Executive Duties

The Victoria and District Parent Teachers Council will conduct a workshop for PTA officers at Central Junior High School Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The purpose of the workshop is to review duties of those now holding office or considering office.

Anyone interested may attend.

Centre 'A Shambles' After Student Rioting

RAWULPINDI, Pakistan (AP) —Several hundred rioting students attacked the American Centre in Peshawar today, leaving it a shambles, reliable sources reported.

The mob stormed through the centre housing the U.S. Information Agency library, breaking windows and destroying books and typewriters.

One Pakistani employee was badly cut about the face as he tried to pull down an iron grill over the front windows, one source said.

About 1,000 students paraded through the main street of Peshawar in an anti-government demonstration.

A group of several hundred turned down a side street to the American Centre and began stoning it. Police moved in and arrested four persons, the director of the centre, Donald Horan, said.

The centre was last attacked during the Arab-Israeli War in June, 1967.

Peshawar is also the site of a U.S. airbase located about eight miles from the library. The base is to be closed next July after a 10-year agreement expires.

PROTESTS CONTINUE

Student demonstrations against President Mohammed Ayub Khan continued for the third straight day in Rawalpindi today, with roving gangs of youths stoning buses.

Nearly 20,000 students marched through the capital Tuesday in the largest anti-government demonstration since Ayub Khan seized power 10 years ago. The government announced that schools and collegts in the area would remain closed indefinitely.

UBC Plans 'Crisis' Campaign

VANCOUVER (CP)—A crisis campaign, which would enlist students and faculty in drawing attention to what university officials claim is a serious crisis in higher education in British Columbia, is under consideration.

At a press conference today Dr. Kenneth Hare, president of the University of B.C., was expected to outline details of the crisis, which he says has left UBC desperately short of space and money.

UBC officials have said in the last year that the university needs more than $100,000,000 in the next five years to meet a projected increase in enrolment to 34,000 from 20,000.

They also claim the university now has proper facilities for only 13,000 students. Dr. Hare's proposals were hinted at Tuesday when he told law students that UBC might limit law school enrolment.

"I told the law students they weren't the only ones with problems," he said later.

$90,000 Settlement In Deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — The widows of two Vancouver-area workmen killed when the communications tower on which they were working was struck by a helicopter Tuesday accepted damages totalling $90,000 in an out of court settlement.

Killed in a May, 1966, fall from a 200-foot tower on Mount Seymour in North Vancouver, were Robert Smith of Cloverdale, and Joseph Yoner of Burnaby.

The two men were removing the top part of the tower with the assistance of a helicopter when one of its blades struck the structure, sending the two men to their deaths.

Marjorie Smith and Evelyn Yoner, who both have two children, filed a British Columbia Supreme Court suit against pilot Robert Hanson who survived the crash of his helicopter.

In the settlement, Mrs. Smith received $52,500 and Mrs. Yoner $37,500.

Canadian Warships Shadowed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Russians now are shadowing Canadian naval exercises involving only two or three warships, a defence department spokesman says.

Previously, Soviet trawlers and oceanographic ships bristling with electronic equipment did not bother to keep an eye on Canadian naval operations until an exercise comprised about 12 ships.

Now, the spokesman said, the Russians are watching the smallest manoeuvres, and only a couple of hundred miles off Canada's eastern seaboard.

Dynamite Death Ruled Accidental

A corner's jury Tuesday ruled that Anton Sorensen, 2843 Scott, died accidentally following an explosion Oct. 17 on Mayne Island.

The jury was told earlier Sorenson died in hospital Nov. 2 of bronchial pneumonia with brain lacerations and a skull fracture.

The accident occured while Mr. Sorensen was using a jack hammer in a blast hole for a telephone pole. The hammer apparently touched off unexploded dyamite.

New Schedule Ruled Out For E&N

Canadian Pacific Railway Chairman N. R. Crump has stated the company is not considering a change of schedule in the Esquimalt and Nanaimo passenger service.

Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson asked the railway if it would consider a schedule change to make the operation more profitable.

CPR announced during the summer it intends to stop operating the E & N dayliner because it is not paying its way. The Canadian Transport Commission ordered the service to continue until a study could be made and public hearings held.

REVERSE RUN

Mayors in up-Island communities served by the daily return run have suggested the dayliner would attract more business if it started its run at the Courtenay end rather than at Victoria.

Mr. Crump said the company does not believe a schedule change would result in any significant increase in passenger traffic.

He added that Vancouver Island Coach Lines now operate four buses daily between Nanaimo and Courtenay and five daily between Nanaimo and Victoria.

Most of the residents north of Nanaimo shop either in Nanaimo or in Vancouver, he said. The buses to Victoria provide convenient times for shopping in the capital.

New Position To Untangle Merger Woes

PORT ALBERNI — Mayor Fred Bishop has announced creation of a special executive position to straighten the bylaw tangle that resulted when Alberni and Port Alberni amalgamated last year.

City manager H. D. Thain will become executive administrative assistant to mayor and council Jan. 1.

"A terrific amount of work is involved in correlating the by-laws," he said today.

City clerk since 1951, Mr. Thain became manager when that position was created in 1966.

He said the new position will relieve him of "day-today chores" so he can concentrate on clearing up the confusion in the 2½ years until he retires.

Jim Sawyer, assistant city manager and former Alberni manager, will become manager of the combined city of 18,500.

Curbs Asked to End Waste in Education

PORT ALBERNI — A provincial board to co-ordinate financing and courses of the three British Columbia universities must be formed, a University of B.C. Alumni Association official said here Tuesday.

Stan Evans, president, said such a board is the only way to avoid wasteful spending in higher education. He was speaking to the local branch of the association in the Greenwood Motor Hotel.

"Our society cannot afford to indulge in duplication of expensive educational programs in such specialized areas as medicine, dentistry and some aspects of engineering," he said.

"With the rapid growth of universities in this province there is a dnager of this happening.

"Some authority must be established to determine at which institution these programs will be emphasized."

Mr. Evans said an association committee will present a brief this week to the Perry Commission on Inter-University Relations based on several months' study.

"One of the main recommendations in the brief is that there should be an over-all body to co-ordinate the financing as well as the course offerings of the three universities under a setup that will permit each university a fair amount of initiative," he said.

U.S. Plans to Deport Draft Evader

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The U.S. immigration service has ordered a 24-year-old man deported because, the service charges, he went to Canada and voluntarily gave up his citizenship to escape the draft.

Deportation orders were issued Tuesday for Thomas Glenn Jolley, a native of Greensboro, N.C., but who has lived in the Atlanta area during recent years.

The deportation order was issued after a hearing before a special inquiry officer last September.

The hearing officer, Milton Milich, gave Jolley 90 days in which to leave the United States. At the end of that time, the order says, Jolley will be deported.

However, the immigration service did not say where Jolley would be sent.

This poses a unique problem for the government, and Jolley's case undoubtedly will set a precedent whatever the outcome.

It is possible that he may become a modern man without a country.

Jolley, a former employee in the legal aid office at Emory University, has resigned.

Records show that Jolley signed a formal oath of renunciatin of citizenship in May, 1967, in Toronto in the presence of U.S. consul Richard J. Dols.

Jolley still has the right of appeal to the board of immigration appeals in Washington, and from there he can carry his case into the federal courts.

NEW HEART WORKING WELL

PARIS (AP) — France's eighth heart transplant operation was performed today in the Broussais Hospital here. A doctor said the patient's condition was "satisfactory in all aspects." The recipient was reported to be a man 33 years old and the donor was a man 57, who was killed in an accident.

12 Firemen Injured in Blast

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (Reuters) — Twelve firemen were injured Tuesday night when a propane gas storage tank exploded at a General Motors industrial park.

Police said the tank, containing 30,000 gallons of propane gas, exploded and caused a general alarm fire. More than 3,500 employees in the industrial park were forced to leave as the fire raged.

Firemen from several communities, 100 local police and state troopers and many employees battled the blaze.

GETS LITTLE SNOW

The Antarctic gets only six inches of snow annually—equal to about half an inch of rain.

The explosion caused damage to the Chevrolet and Fisher body plants on the 100-acre complex, sending huge balls of fire into the air.

The complex, 23 miles from midtown New York, is the largest General Motors installation outside the Detroit area.

Farmers Face Dampening After Toughest Wheat Harvest

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian farmers have harvested the toughest wheat crop in history this fall and now face a distinct possibility of losing part of it through spoilage.

W. C. McNamara, Canadian Wheat Board chief commissioner, told a news conference Tuesday the situation is critical.

"I am very much afraid that regardless of the efforts to salvage the grain, some serious losses will result next spring when the weather gets warmer."

He said an October survey indicated about 380,000,000 bushels —about 50 per cent of the total wheat stored on the Prairies— are out of condition. This estimate likely will be revised upward when a survey now under way is completed.

It represents almost twice as much damp grain as the industry was faced with in 1951 when a record 200,000,000 bushels was harvested.

This year, for the first time, the volume is far beyond the capacity of commercial drying facilities.

The latest report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics forecast that farmers will harvest a wheat crop of 649,844,000 bushels.

Terminals have a maximum drying capacity of 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels over the next eight months.

Tough wheat has a moisture content of 14.6 to 17 per cent while damp grain, the most vulnerable to spoilage, has a moisture content above 17 per cent.

Out-of-condition grain heats, and spoils, except during cold weather. That means farmers have the best chance of saving their damp grain by drying it before spring.

Dr. McNamara said, however, that "current reports from provincial departments of agriculture indicate that it is possible under optimum conditions" to dry 50,000,000 bushels of wheat a month on farms. On that basis, it is unlikely that all the grain could be handled even if the farm-located driers worked at capacity.

Farm spokesmen attending the joint news conference and meeting of the grain transportation committee said all available driers are not being used to capacity.

F. F. Hamilton, chief commissioner of the Board of Grain Commissioners, said farmers seem to have the attitude that the commercial trade will be able to handle the damp grain as it has in the past. He said, however, this is impossible this year.

Mr. McNamara, chairman of the transportation committee set up in 1965 when 150,000,000 bushels of damp grain was harvested, said a sub-committee has been established to ensure that no bottlenecks develop in the commercial movement of damp grain.

Centre Spending 'Squandermania'

OTTAWA (CP) — Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) Tuesday called Ottawa's National Arts Centre a "fiscal fiasco" and accused the federal government of "misuse of public funds amounting to squandermania."

Mr. Dinsdale presented a motion to the Commons arts committee calling for parliamentary control of expenditures such as $46,425,000 for the arts centre.

The centre, a centennial project to be completed next year, has come under heavy criticism from opposition members since Parliament re-convened.

It was estimated when conceived in 1963 the building would cost $9,000,000. The first formal estimate in 1964 was $18,200,000.

CHIEF CENSOR within Hollywood's movie industry is Eugene G. Dougherty, who says he expects success in guiding the new film classification program designed to keep youths from seeing racy or too-violent films.

For anyone who is looking for the answer to what Mr. and Mrs. Victoria wants when they go to the McPherson Playhouse, the Victoria Operatic Society apparently has the answer.

It's nostalgia. Nostalgia decked out in plenty of color and singable music and stuffed liberally with corn and sugary romance.

What other conclusion can one come to whem for the first time in weeks a first night has been all but sold out with the box office doing a brisk business for the subsequent four nights on which The Desert Song will be seen.

And it's my guess that Tuesday night's whistling, wildly applauding audience will quickly provide the box office with a "sold out" sign and a waiting list.

Seriously, this is a production that has merit in several aspects, whether or not the musical itself happens to be on one's list of favorites.

Speaking personally, I wish that stage director Richard Litt, who seemed to have a mind toward accentuating the obvious, had gone all the way in making the production a tongue-in-cheek spoof of the 20's decade of musicals.

Actually he had two choices with this cliche-riddled piece of candy floss — either to spoof it or to sedulously avoid every vestige of triteness in directing the actors in order to dilute the corn.

As it is I rather feel that he has fallen between two stools.

Nevertheless he is to be congratulated on managing to keep the stage from appearing cluttered in spite of having one of the biggest choruses ever assembled by VOS. And for avoiding dead spots and keeping the whole thing moving efficiently.

The voices of Ruth Champion, Harry Elsdon and Barry Grimshaw are pleasurable as always.

Bass-baritone Hans Steffen and tenor Roy Blevins both emerge as notable assets and achieve a fair degree of conviction in their characterizations.

These two superior voices are particularly arresting in what to me is the best scene in the entrie show — the all-male concerted number, Eastern and Western Love.

Talented comedian Janet Senior with partner Cliff Clarke give a typically pantomine performance that reaches its peak when they arrive on stage atop a genuine mule, Sprite.

But the freshest laurels must go to Dr. Dinah Hendrie.

Not only does she conduct a large orchestra with exquisite precision but she combines a splendid vitality with a sensitivity and real tenderness that makes the sometimes mawkish music sound better than it is.

Not only that, but she has inveigled the chorus into sounding clearer, crisper and sweeter than it has done on most former occasions.

Desert Song continues through Saturday with curtain at 8 p.m. and with, for Victoria Operatic, the happy sensation that it is a foregone success.

Winnipeg Ballet Captures Prizes

PARIS (Reuters) — Two prizes of the sixth International Dance Festival here have been awarded to the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, organizers announced today.

The prizes, to be presented Saturday, were for the best company and for the best female interpretation which went to Christine Hennessy.

HOME GARDEN

Planning Rock Garden

By HILDA BEASTALL

A rock garden may be only a small portion of the total garden area, yet in some cases it is the focal point of attention from November to March. "How can this be?" asks the beginning gardener. "Nearly all rock plants flower in spring, judging from those I've seen, and after that nothing much is there to look at."

Hilda

The answer lies in choosing plants carefully, keeping in mind their use for foliage color as apart from their flowers.

A small rock garden cannot accommodate hundreds of plants nor even a representative number of either the easiest or most desirable, but those chosen should give satisfaction throughout the year.

Small bulbs will cover winter months quite well for flowers, but their foliage is negligible, so a clever way to use them is in groups combined with plants having fine winter color in their foliage.

Saxifrages and sempervivums come to mind, as well as hardy cyclamens with beautifully marbled leaves.

These all produce flowers of interest in their season, while still maintaining their attractive foliage.

Winter blooming heathers and dark green perennial candytuft give excellent winter interest, as will one or two of the truly dwarf conifers.

If spring blooming Gentiana acaulis will grow well for you, it makes a lovely fresh green mat for winter, as do some of the creeping phlox. But beware of too many widely spreading plants in a small rock garden.

A well planned and well kept rock area will need some attention in winter, and if it contains plants which attract interest at that period, it is more likely to get it.

Keep the plants and their flowers in scale with the size of the rock garden, and don't expect sun lovers to thrive in winter shade of trees, nor shade lovers to endure hot summer baking.

Experiment and learn in this as in all phases of gardening. More satisfaction is encountered by discovering from one's own efforts than by merely following a plan layed down by another person.

YOUR HEALTH

Explanation Of Tubal Pregnancy

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Several women write, asking me, "What is a tubal pregnancy?" At first, I should say near the top of the womb, on each side, there comes off a fallopian tube; they are called fallopian because an ancient anatomist, named Fallopius, described them. Each of these tubes runs out to a point near an ovary. When an ovum (microscopic egg) comes out of an ovary, the end of the tube picks it up and causes it to travel down three inches or so toward the womb. Along the way, if the ovum is fertilized, it will go down into the womb, where in nine months it will be a baby.

Alvares

Unfortunately, in an occasional case, perhaps because the lining of the fallopian tube was a bit damaged by some infection, the fertilized ovum remains in the tube, and grows there. Since the tube has a thin wall, naturally after some weeks it ruptures and bleeds. Often a woman can realize something is wrong when she has pain and distress on the left or right side of her pelvis. With the loss of blood she may begin to feel weak and ill. Then, especially if she has missed a period and perhaps has had some nausea and other signs of being pregnant, she should suspect she may have a ruptured tubal pregnancy, and this means she had better get to a surgeon quickly. When he opens the abdomen and finds the bleeding spot, he will probably remove the tube. Usually then the woman is well, and ready to go home in ten days or so.

★ ★ ★

Two questions are now asked of me: Can this sort of thing happen more than once? Yes, I don't see why it couldn't happen to the tube on the other side. The tubal rupture must be rather rare, because when I was young and for three years had a big obstetric practice, I cannot remember that I ever saw a patient with a tubal pregnancy.

The next question is, Can a woman with only one tube have a healthy baby? Yes, I have known of this happening.

★ ★ ★

Regional ileitis is a rare disease of the small bowel, first described by Dr. Burril B. Crohn of New York City and usually called "Crohn's disease." It is fortunate it is rare, because as yet we physicians have no good and sure treatment for it. Commonly, the swollen and inflamed segments of small bowel have to be cut out surgically, and then the disease sometimes returns.

Now I read Drs. P. C. Whybrow, F. J. Kane, Jr., and M. A. Lipton of Chapel Hill, N.C., say 24 of 39 patients with this disease, whom they saw, were being distressed by some anxiety, depression, or family trouble. This now gives me hope that if these troubled persons can only be given peace and mental quiet they can get well and stay well.

I have known that often a patient with chronic ulcerative colitis is suffering from a psychic strain. One eminent man got a badly inflamed bowel when his great invention did not work perfectly, and a lovely woman soon developed an ulcerated bowel when she married the wrong man. I remember a lad of 12 or so who got a badly ulcerated bowel when his parents started fighting and talking of divorce in front of him.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Brave Indian Woman Saved Explorers

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1821 the Hudson's Bay Company absorbed the North West Company, and so ended 40 years of fierce fur-trading rivalry. The new company then began a determined effort to try to control fur-trading on the Pacific coast from San Francisco to the Arctic Ocean. It was a race against the Americans who had also established posts as far north as Fort Kamloops.

Bowman

The problem was to establish transportation routes through the Rockies and New Caledonia, as the mainland of British Columbia was called. The daring Nor'Westers, Mackenzie, Fraser, and Thompson had paved the way, but a great deal more information was needed.

One of the outstanding Hudson's Bay Company men entrusted with this work was John M. McLeod who began a trek through the Rockies on November 27, 1822. Some of the early explorers preferred to travel through the Rockies in winter rather than summer despite the intense cold. The snow and frozen lakes sometimes made travel easier.

Although McLeod made many daring trips of this nature, one of his greatest adventures came much later in his career. In February 1839 he and Robert Campbell were camping at Dease Lake. They were almost starving and were beginning to eat the parchment covering their windows when they were visited by a tribe of Nahanie Indians led by their great chieftainess, who gave them some food. McLeod later described the chieftainess as being about 35 years old, medium height, with eyes that flashed like fire.

In the middle of the night some of the Nahanie braves entered the room where McLeod and Campbell were sleeping, and grabbed their guns. The Hudson's Bay men expected to be murdered, but just then the chieftainess appeared and shouted for silence. She recognized the leader of the group, walked to him with her eyes blazing with anger, and spat in his face.

McLeod wrote: "I have seen many far-famed warrier chiefs with their bands in every kind of mood, but I never saw one who had so much absolute authority or was as bold and ready to exercise it as that noble woman. She was truly a born leader whose mandate none dared dispute."

Other event on November 27:

1618—Marc Lescarbot got permission to publish "History of New France."

1783—Shipping service was restored between Halifax and New York.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas

Andy sends 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to John K. O'Neill, age 11, of Frederickton, N.B., for his question:

What sort of bird is a petrel?

If you live near the sea, you almost certainly have seen him. But perhaps you mistook the petrel for a teenage sea gull or some other ocean-going bird. As a rule he is very busy with a group of his friends and relatives—and their antics often are very amusing to watch.

Bird lovers list about 57 members of the petrel family. And all of them are children of the sea. Their spindly legs are not suitable for life on land and when they try to launch themselves from the ground, they have to beat their wings frantically. They are too clumsy on land to escape the many meat-eating prowlers, but the petrels are quite at home on and over the seas. Some of them do not bother to come near the shore for six months at a time. There is plenty of fishy food to be found in the oceans. When tired of flying, the sea-going petrel just sits down on the water like a duck. He has webbed feet that he can use as paddles to row himself along. Or he can leave his feet dangling and just bob up and down on the waves.

All the petrels are built somewhat like the graceful gulls, but many of them are no bigger than robins and swallows. The biggest one has a wingspread that spans 20-inches wide. The petrels do not wear snowy-white plumage like most of the gulls. Their most popular colors are browns and greys, which give them a rather drab appearance. Most of them wear their favorite colors in patches and some may have patches of rather dirty-looking white. They have long curved bills that may be black or white or pink.

Lays One Egg

The name of the petrel was borrowed from Saint Peter, who managed to walk on the water. People in the Old World noticed that the little petrel bird also walks on top of the water—after a fashion. He uses his big webbed feet to splash a path on the waves and beats his wings frantically as though he fears he will sink. He is not really a very successful water walker, but this does not seem to discourage him or his friends from trying and it is fun to watch their antics as they dash and splash around.

Certain petrels who live south of the equator are superb divers. They fly clear through the crests of the high waves or plummet down into the sea and swim under water. Some people say that they can zoom up from a dive underwater straight into a flight in the air—all in one swift motion. In the Old World people noticed that the dainty little birds tend to get caught by a high wind and be blown far inland. Such winds often came before storms and when a petrel was seen way off his natural course, he was counted as a weather warning. He was named the stormy petrel.

When nesting time comes around, many flocks of petrels fly south, far south to lonely shores and islands. There they nest on cold, deserted islands near the south polar continent of Antarctica. The mother birds lay only one precious egg. Both parents take turns keeping it warm and both work hard to feed and pamper their fuzzy, fat chick. In about three months he is ready to leave the nest and join his friends and relatives on ocean-going trips, far and wide around the world.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Donald Cook, age 13, of West Warwick, Rhode Island, for his question:

When was the first hydrogen bomb tested?

Compared with other nuclear explosions, the first hydrogen explosion was a small scale affair first tested in the spring of 1951. The test was directed by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and nuclear scientists were satisfied that this type of nuclear explosion was feasible. A major problem had been to find a suitable detonator to trigger off the mighty forces of this type of nuclear fusion bomb. The test proved that such a trigger could be provided by a nuclear fission explosion, already mastered in the A-bomb. This works somewhat like a cap of hot-tempered chemicals which is used to trigger a stick of dynamite.

Large scale hydrogen bombs were built soon after the first test. The Unites States exploded the first large scale fission-fusion bomb on a remote coral atoll in the Pacific on November 1, 1952. It was a 60-ton bomb that exploded with the force equal to three million tons of TNT—which rated it as a three megaton bomb. This hydrogen bomb was 150 times more devastating than the A-bomb used to wipe out the Japanese city of Hiroshima.

Strip Mining Probe Urged By Macdonald

A full legislative inquiry into strip mining should be launched as soon as MLAs begin the Jan. 23 session, deputy NDP Leader Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

"Believe it or not the government is giving the green light to promoters to turn vast areas of this province into wasteland, wihout any laws whatever for the protection or reclaiming of the land," he told reporters here.

The Vancouver-East MLA said an entire mountain bearing low-grade copper has been sheered off by the Granby Mining Company at Phoenix, B.C., and claimed that areas in the Crows Nest Pass and Elk River Valley are marked for destruction by Kaiser Coal Corp. to obtain coal for export.

The provincial government is conducting a "coal sell-out with no strings attached" to the U.S. Steel Company, he charged.

He added that the Highland Valley, Peachland, Babine Lake, Texada Island and Endako are other areas threatened with desecration by uncontrolled open pit mining.

SHORT YEARS

"In a few short years our irreplaceable natural heritage is being scarred forever to pile up corporate profits in Cleveland and New York and to feed blast furnaces thousands of miles from this province," Mr. MacDonald said.

"For 16 years Social Credit have proved themselves delinquent guardians of B.C.'s natural heritage."

THIRD person to be named a White House assistant by president-elect Nixon is Robert F. Ellsworth, 42, former Republican congressman from Kansas.

Greetings To Britain Costs More

A Christmas card to Britain will cost you more than a card to Spain.

Not much more, mind you, but enough that the post office has had to tax a bundle of cards with inadequate postage.

An official said today persons sending greetings overseas do not understand the new postal rates, recently put into effect.

"We're getting an awful lot of mail for Britain with five cent postage on it," he said.

"We have no alternative but to tax it."

A card to Spain costs five cents—while one to Britain costs six.

The five-cent rate applies to cards sent locally and across Canada, to the United States and its possessions, all of North, Central and South America, the West Indies and Spain.

All other destinations require a six-cent stamp. All rates apply to unsealed cards, sent as third-class mail.

The difference in rates for some countries is set by agreements within the postal unions.

130 Handicapped Placed in Jobs In Two Years

In the past two years 130 handicapped people from Goodwill Enterprises have been successfully placed in self-supporting outside employment.

Speaking to 70 members and guests of the Douglas Rotary Club at a dinner meeting Monday at Goodwill, president-treasurer George A. Gray said his organization is a stepping stone to success for many handicapped people.

"At this moment, Goodwill Enterprises is giving training or employment to 167 people, many of whom will move on from Goodwill into outside jobs," he said.

Skid Road Deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten Indian girls have died on Vancouver's Skid Road in the last few months, Dr. Shauna Makaroff, chairman of an Indian aid society, says. "They died of alcoholism, overdose of drugs, tuberculosis and even from beatings."

'After Third Bullet Hit Me I Knew I Wasn't Dead'

SEATTLE (AP) — Bobby Ray Johnson has nine bullet wounds in his head, one through his right shoulder and one in his right wrist, but he's up and around at the hospital.

Johnson, 33, of Waldport, Ore., was shot with .22-calibre pistols as he sat in a car with two other men early Sunday.

"I thought I was dead when a guy put a gun against the back of my head and fired," he said Monday night at the hospital.

"After the third bullet hit me, I knew I wasn't dead, and I started fighting."

SHOT 'THEIR VERDICT'

He said he met the two men in front of a restaurant, and they told him they wanted to talk, so he got in their car beside the driver while the other man sat in the back seat.

"At a parking lot," Johnson said, "the driver turned to the man in back, asking, 'What's your verdict?' It came as a blast with the gun pressed right against the back of my head."

Johnson said he wrestled the gun from one of the men but threw it out of the car when he discovered it was empty. Then, as he got out of the car, the other man fired two more times at him.

None of the bullets penetrated his skull, a hospital attendant said, although one or two may have lodged under the skin of his face. One bullet was removed.

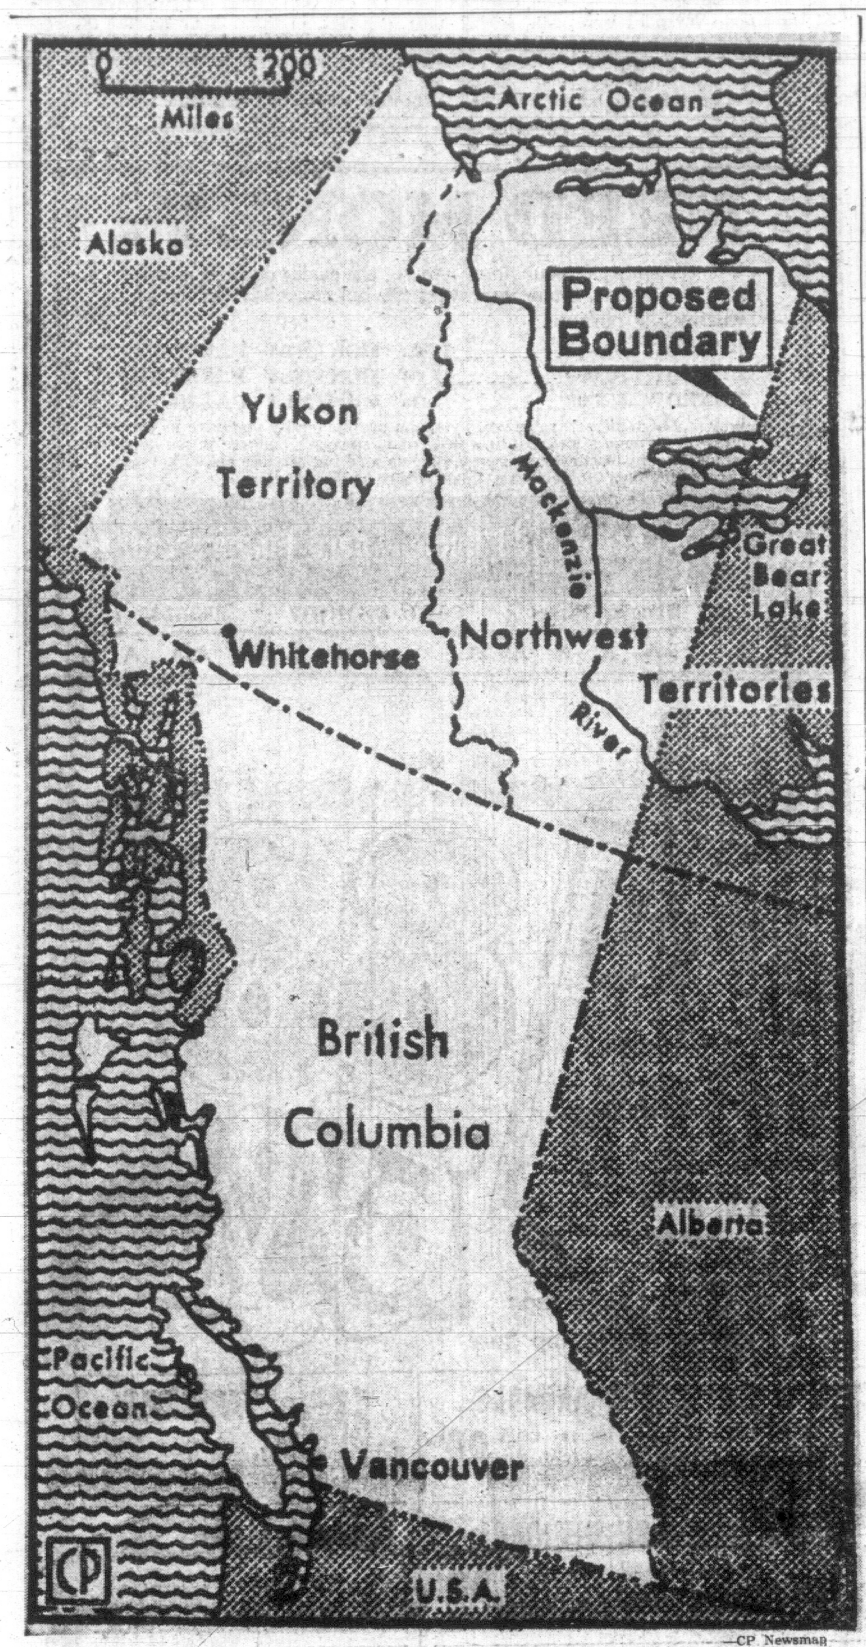
Four-Way Peace Talks Resume 'Within Days'



—CP Newsman

HERE IS HOW the "new B.C." would look if Premier Bennett is successful in his bid to annex all of the Yukon and the western part of the Northwest Territories. He said Tuesday he will apply at next month's constitutional conference in Ottawa for the boundary extension.

Drop Charges: SFU Head

. . . gets reasons

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Dr Kenneth Strand, acting president of Simon Fraser University, announced today he will ask the attorney-general to "give every consideration" for the withdrawal of criminal charges against 114 students arrested in a sit-in Saturday.

Dr. Strand said he had received a letter overnight from Rob Walsh, president of the SFU Student Society, outlining 10 reasons why the charges should be dropped.

He had asked for reasons why the charges should be dropped in a reply to a series of student demands Tuesday night.

The student demands and Dr. Strand's replies followed the arrest of the 114 and charges of obstruction of property being laid against them after police cleared them from the campus administration building which they had occupied since Wednesday.

Mr. Walsh said 2,300 SFU students had signed a petition requesting Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to drop all criminal charges and that, since the purpose of the RCMP was only to clear the building, prosecution was unnecessary.

He said occupants of the building were unaware of the consequences of having a criminal record and could not be considered "fully conscious of committing a criminal act."

"The conviction of the students arrested will in future endanger the possibility of rational debate to resolve the university's problems," he warned.

Mr. Walsh said Dr. Strand's action in appealing to the attorney-general "sort of changes the complexion of things" but he said students were going ahead with a special rally today. They had earlier threatened a general strike.

Dr. Strand Tuesday night rejected a call for a special senate meeting on admission procedures, but said he will set up a student-faculty committee to decide whether registrar's files should be opened.

ENDED OCCUPATION

The pre-dawn arrest of the occupiers ended the occupation which started Wednesday night after the senate rejected student demands for sweeping changes in admission and accreditation policies.

Students Tuesday decided to vote today on whether to strike Thursday. There was no indica-

CONG ISLAND BLOCKADED

SAIGON (UPI) — An Allied task force landed by an armada of more than 50 vessels blockaded a Communist island stronghold deep in the Mekong Delta today in what military spokesmen said was the biggest such operation of the war.

Military spokesmen said more than 1,000 South Vietnamese infantrymen were moved ashore from the Allied vessels that set up the blockade around a 20-mile string of islands in the Bassic River, 75 miles southwest of Saigon. The river is one of the key supply routes for Communist forces operating around Saigon.

South Viet Nam Ends Boycott

Times News Services

SAIGON—President Nguyen Van Thieu said today a South Vietnamese delegation will go to the Paris talks within the next 10 days but he cautioned his country not to expect peace to come soon. The enemy will fight while he talks, Thieu declared.

THIEU
. . . 'lots of goodwill'

He said he will announce the makeup of the delegation in the next few days.

Thieu said that Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky will go to Paris as over-all co-ordinator of the Saigon delegation, although he will not actually sit in on the negotiating sessions.

Thieu said that Ky "is the man I rely on to lead the delegation to Paris, but he is not the chief of the delegation."

"His role will be to co-ordinate and advise the delegation itself."

DOESN'T SEE PEACE

Thieu, appearing on television and nationwide radio 12 hours after his government announced it had lifted its 25-day boycott of the Paris talks, declared: "Talks with the Communists do not mean peace will be restored soon. They will fight while they are talking and talk while they are fighting."

Thieu said South Vietnam, however, will show to its allies and the enemy "that we have plenty of goodwill."

He asserted that whether "aggression" ends "depends on Hanoi and their tool"—an obvious reference to the rebel National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

Thieu's regime announced Tuesday night it had agreed to end its boycott of the Paris talks in return for the right to head the bargaining on South Vietnamese internal matters.

In Paris, a National Liberation Front spokesman said the NLF would insist on going into the four-way talks "as an independent party on the same footing" as the United States, North Vietnam and the South Vietnamese.

Spokesman Duong Dinh Thao rejected the U.S.-South Vietnamese statement that Washington and Saigon regarded the Paris talks as a two-sided meeting in which the NLF would be part of the North Vietnamese team.

The NLF claims it is the true representative of the people of South Vietnam.

Although Thieu said the talks would get under way "in the next few days" U.S. officials in Washington expect the serious conferences will not get going until late in December.

Thieu complained that since the Nov. 1 halt in bombing of North Vietnam by the United States "there have been more violations by shellings in towns and the killing of innocent children and women."

Both Saigon and Washington announced simultaneously Tuesday night the end of South Vietnam's boycott of the expanded talks.

'We Shouldn't Be Sheepish On NATO Ties'

See also Page 15

Defence Minister Cadieux said Tuesday that Canada should not be "sheepish or bashful" about its commitment to NATO.

Describing himself as a "firm believer in collective security," the minister talked to reporters on his arrival at Victoria airport.

"I really believe we are doing something really worthwhile" with the 5,000 soldiers and six air squadrons in West Germany, he said.

He added that the "sizable" naval force Canada has in the Atlantic is "also contributing to the stability of the world.

"And I think this is an important contribution."

ADVISORY BOARD MEETS

Mr. Cadieux is here until Thursday, attending the 11th meeting of the Canadian Military College advisory board at Royal Roads.

The board, composed of senior government and military officials and civilian advisors from all provinces, advises the minister on the operation of Canada's three military colleges.

He said he is not aware of any cabinet split over Canada's NATO policy.

A cabinet committee now is examing this country's NATO role and no decision on future plans would be made until the report is made.

He said the NATO allies were

Kierans Favors Pull-Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans, making it clear he will abide by cabinet decisions, told an interviewer Tuesday night he personally favors a Canadian withdrawal from NORAD.

A guest on the CBC network program Twenty Million Questions, he was asked about statements he had made in the past about Canada leaving the North American Air Defence agreement it has with the United States.

Mr. Kierans said "this hasn't come up in cabinet—thank the Lord. . . ."

Then to an interviewer's question about whether he still feels the same way about NORAD, the minister replied:

"I still feel the same way. I don't think we have any contribution to make in this field.

"I think at the bottom of many of France's difficulties at the moment is that it has just expended too high a percentage of its gross national product on areas and set aside or let go needs in areas of education or in welfare . . . that people want and are crying for."

This appeared to be a reference to France's nuclear military program.

Bennett Plan Draws Smirks From North

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Commissioner Stuart Hodgson said Tuesday that each time Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia announces a plan to take over part of the north, residents take him with a grain of salt.

Mr. Hodgson said the B.C. premier wanted the Yukon in 1964 and "no one took it seriously." Another approach including part of the N.W.T., was made in 1967 and was similar to one made Tuesday. The reaction was the same.

"Most provinces need to develop their own north before ever thinking of expanding north of 60 (the 60th parallel)."

The territorial commissioner said he was speaking as a N.W.T. resident and any official statement would have to come from Prime Minister Trudeau. That included whether the proposal would be discussed at a federal-provincial constitutional conference as requested by Mr. Bennett.

HODGSON
. . . same reaction

Mr. Hodgson said most residents agree with N.W.T. Councillor J. Gordon Gibson, who said in 1967 that, rather than B.C. take over the N.W.T., it was more likely the N.W.T. one day would take over B.C.

'NOT HOT AIR'

A prominent Yellowknife resident, who declined to be identified, said:

"The north is noted for its cold air, not hot air."

In Whitehorse, Yukon Territorial Commissioner James Smith and Mayor Bert Wybrew laughed at the premier's annexation plan.

"Premier Bennett is a very able and astute politician but we need him like we need another hole in the head," said Commissioner Smith.

"This is not a new offer and it is still pretty one-sided."

Mayor Wybrew said if the proposal was ever put to the people of the Yukon the premier would be "overwhelmed with negative reaction."

"There is no doubt Premier Bennett could do with some of our resources but we are not likely to part with them. All phases of our economy are booming and everyone wants to get on the bandwagon.

"Let Bennett solve his problems his way but without bringing us into it."

'LOTS TO DO HERE'

Premier Bennett has plenty to accomplish in B.C. before he casts longing eyes at the Yukon and Northwest Territories, Opposition Leader Strachan said Tuesday.

"The NDP feels now, as we did in 1964, when the premier first made this proposal to the Yukon and Northwest Territories, that there are a great many unfilled needs to be eliminated in B.C. before this province takes on additional responsibilities," he said.

"I understand the people of these northern territories are thinking of forming their own province. We must respect their wishes.

Uvic Rally Called To Protest Arrests

Posters announcing a mass meeting of students early this afternoon appeared on University of Victoria campus this morning.

The meeting, in the lobby of the MacLaren Building, was to discuss charges laid Saturday against 114 Simon Fraser University students for occupying the administration building there.

"Pressure must be brought to bear on the attorney-general's department to have the charges dropped," the posters state.

Bob Higinbotham, one of the meeting organizers, said he was expecting between 500 and 600 students to attend.

"We're going to suggest to the students a delegation go to see Attorney-General Leslie Peterson," he said.

"We might also suggest the students mandate the students council to ask the board of governors to do something about the charges at their meeting on Friday."

A news report from Vancouver this morning stated that SFU acting president Dr. Kenneth Strand had decided to ask the attorney-general to consider withdrawal of criminal charges.

S. Viet Decision Hailed by Allies

By REUTERS

The four allies fighting with the United States and South Vietnam today welcomed the Saigon government's decision to join the peace talks in Paris.

The four, Australia, New Zealand, South Korea and Thailand, issued statements complimenting the South Vietnamese government on reversing its position and deciding to attend the talks.

In addition, Japanese and British spokesmen applauded the South Vietnamese decision. A Japanese foreign ministry spokesman said his government hoped peace would be achieved through negotiations as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, South Vietnam's National Liberation Front said it is ready to participate in the enlarged peace talks.

The NLF, political arm of the Viet Cong, will take part in the new conference as an independent party on an equal footing with all the other participants, a spokesman said.

DIPLOMATIC FOUL-UP HAS WILSON BOILING

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — British-West German relations have taken on a sudden chill as the result of a diplomatic foul-up at the height of last week's international monetary crisis.

Just who tripped is not clear, but a clash has developed over German-issued reports that Prime Minister Wilson tried to blackmail West Germany into revaluing the mark.

Wilson is denying it, in undiplomatic language.

The row developed when Germany was under pressure to revalue the mark upwards, supposedly to save French and British currencies. An official German spokesman said in Bonn that Wilson called in the German ambassador here and threatened to withdraw some of Britain's NATO forces from Germany if it was not done.

In the Commons Tuesday night Wilson called the allegation "quite false."

"I very much deplore the leaks—inaccurate leaks—in Bonn about what took place," he said. "I have never known such a thing in four years of communication with over 100 heads of government."

PUT UP ARGUMENT

While Wilson did not say what happened, it develops that he did call in the ambassador and put up a strong argument for German co-operation in maintaining monetary equilibrium by revaluing.

He is reported to have pointed to a recent NATO communique stressing need for sharing the financial burdens of the alliance, which seems to have been carried a step further in the German "leaks."

The ambassador, Dr. Herbert Blankenhorn, confirmed Tuesday that he had not been bullied.

However, a certain amount of German rancor was reported to have been generated at Bonn by table-pounding on the part of Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, at last week's save-the-franc sessions of Western finance ministers. The Germans took the view that the strong mark was being called on unjustifiably, to bail out improvident neighbors.

It probably will take a round of soothing diplomatic notes to get the ruffled national feathers into place.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, NOV. 27, 1968—PAGE 15

Arthur Mayse

No plaudits here for Dr. Kenneth Strand, the acting president of Simon Fraser University, who last week did what an academic cannot undertake without destroying his usefulness. Faced by an administrative crisis, he called in outside authority, and liberated a campus building at a cost that now becomes apparent.

Some of the pressures and frustrations under which he labored have been reported.

The group that occupied SFU's administration headquarters had refused to parley except on its own terms. I suspect that the heavy thumb of government was also bearing down hard on Dr. Strand. But the thing no university can afford is to breach the closed community which it must be if it is to perform its function.

Whether on his own initiative or under orders from above, the acting president called in the police to do what the mere passage of time would have accomplished.

One result of his act was the arrest of 114 young men and women who had been either so naive as to expect instant justice from a university administration, or so wedded to a cause that they were willing to seek and find a modified form of martyrdom.

★

This was no Columbia University confrontation with broken heads a dime a dozen. For the fact, credit the disciplined calm of RCMP officers who conducted the evacuation, and an occupying group that refused to traffic in violence.

A second result was precisely what the acting president who hollered cop might have expected. Censure from student councils of UBC and Uvic, and on his own embroiled campus, a threatened boycott of classes.

These offshoots matter less than the consequences that an administration courts when it departs from the established custom of settling university disputes internally. Interference by government could be one of these and with it a loss of even such limited status as Simon Fraser enjoys.

SFU has been hard on its presidents, and no doubt about it! But while not condoning the occupying of an administrative headquarters as a protest measure, I suggest that the student body does have valid reason to press for an airing of grievances.

Long before this latest trouble descended on its campus, its admittance procedures were under fire.

Pitchforked into an already bad scene, this latest acting president managed only to make matters worse.

Had he waited, students now aligned against him might have been his allies in cooling a crisis and arriving at an amicable settlement.

★

One fact that all participants in this upheaval should digest is that any breach in their walls is a signal for instant attack by the always suspicious and never truly friendly outside world.

I have heard a shocking amount of bilge about universities and those who people them in the days since Simon Fraser made its most recent intrusion into the news.

Here, for instance, is a man who wonders sincerely why students fail to realize that the university purpose is to turn out a product which will fit neatly into the industrial scene.

It isn't. It is to educate, and through education to induce students to think. And when they learn to think, it is not only natural but desirable that they should wonder, question and when necessity demands, protest against injustice.

I don't excuse the method by which the group at Simon Fraser chose to seek a hearing. But we are confronted by greater dangers than student unrest.

The gravest of these is the authoritarianism that provokes it.

Students Fighting In Wrong Arena —Alumni Official

Students seeking social changes should do so in the political arena rather than on campus, an alumni group at Port Alberni was told Tuesday.

"An attack against society as a whole is really quite beyond the responsibility of university administrators," said Jack Stathers, executive director of University of B.C. Alumni Association.

"I believe the radical students should carry their campaign for wider social reform into the area where it belongs — the political arena," he said.

He added the reason universities have become a battleground for change is that students are often the persons most concerned about "social injustice."

They are not committed to defending the status quo and they are free "to think and act in an orthodox manner."

He said universities are vulnerable to these attacks because they profess to be highly democratic and concerned with freedom of thought and expression.

"Students are sick and tired of being sold a bill of goods.

"We have taught them to question the system . . . to fight bigotry and prejudice . . . challenged them to build a better world."

Mr. Stathers said those who advocate demonstrations, strikes and sit-ins are generally bent on social revolution. But most students still believe changes can be made through discussion and negotiations.

He said universities are hard-pressed to keep their doors open to all who apply to enter.

"To expect academic excellence and widespread university reform in the midst of confusion and tension . . . is to expect nearly the impossible."

GRADS SLAM ACTIVISTS

Graduate students of University of Victoria Tuesday condemned "activists" who upset the learning porcess.

The Graduate Student Society, in a press release, said it backs Uvic's Dean Robert Wallace in condoning poliee action at Simon Fraser University last week, when 114 students were arrested.

Astronomy student at Uvic Jack Penfold said the stand was endorsed by the Graduate Students' Society at a recent meeting.

The press statement said:

"The graduate student body of the University of Victoria views with alarm the increasing student unrest, and the dangerous application of politics of confrontiation.

"It is indeed unfortunate that a small minority of activists (student and non-student) are allowed to upset the atmosphere of learning for the majority of students who are sincere in their motive for higher education."

"We are concerned that, as a result of these demonstrations, the academic standing of the University may suffer.

"We support Dean Wallace in his view condoning the use of police action to end the two-day occupation of the Simon Fraser Administration Building. The actions of these students is destructive in nature and the cost in time and material will add to the higher cost of education."

PEACEFUL

The grads said they believe a universtiy must be prepared to change through "peaceful communication and evaluation of ideas."

They said that at Uvic five sub-committee provide this means of communication for all members of the university.

"We therefore do not condone the confrontation of a sit-in by students at a recent faculty of arts and science meeting.

"We wish to express our support and confidence in the administration for their attitude and initiative in setting up this communication link."

The society represents 188 students out of a student body of about 4,900.

Farmers Ask Action To Halt Land Waste

B.C. farmers are discontented at the lack of government action to prevent the waste of farmlands.

They were also critical at the B.C. Federation of Agriculture convention today of the government's failure to implement the recommendations of a royal commission on expropriation of property.

The commission, headed by J. V. Clyne in 1963, recommended a uniform act covering all factors pertaining to property expropriation.

Under the present system, expropriation is possible under various acts, each differing in their requirements.

Delegates pointed out that nothing had yet been done to carry out the recommended reforms.

'WITHOUT DELAY'

"The government went to considerable expense to enquire into expropriation proceedings and has done nothing to implement the recommendations," said one delegate. "It should be done without delay."

Growers also asked the government to make a study on the feasibility of establishing single corridors for public and private services, such as oil pipelines, transmission power lines, roads and railways across farm lands.

One Chilliwack delegate pointed out that there are six corridors in his district for various services.

Acid Throwing 'False Story'

Saanich police today have called off a search for a suspected acid thrower after investigation of what they say was a false story.

Terry Johnson, 16, 7116 West Saanich, told police a youth in a car threw acid at him while he was hitch-hiking on West Saanich Road late Sunday night.

However police said today he had admitted to them the story was false and was one he had given his mother to explain a mark on his neck.

Degree Status Requested By Royal Roads

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said Tuesday that both Royal Roads and College Miltairé Royal at St. Johns, Quebec, have suggested they be permitted to grant degrees.

He said no decision has been made to permit them to do so.

Only Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., now grants bachelor's degrees to graduates.

The 215 cadets at Royal Roads must transfer to RMC after two years to complete their studies.

Mr. Cadieux is spending two days at Royal Roads during the annual meeting of Canadian Military College advisory board.

He said future plans for the local collage will not be specifically discussed during the meeting.

MET BY LEWIS

The minister arrived at Victoria airport aboard a Canadian Forces Yukon Tuesday night. As he led board members from the four-engine aircraft, he received a snappy salute and a greeting from Air Force Col. K. E. Lewis, Royal Roads commandant, waiting on the tarmac.

The board is composed of 12 government, military and civilian representatives and four representatives of the ex-cadets clubs of the military colleges.

Formed in 1954, the board advises and makes recommendations to the minister on operation of the colleges.

Mr. Cadieux denied objections from the Chamber of Commerce and other local business interets that the base exchange at CFB Esquimalt provides "unfair competition."

'PROVIDE SERVICE'

The exchange, called Canex, opened Nov. 1. He said the purpose of the exchange was not to cut prices, but to "provide service" for military personnel.

He said the Canadian Forces had to provide recreational and shopping facilities from non-public funds for personnel stationed on isolated bases.

It was then only fair to provide the same facilities to personnel on all bases.

The department has indicated plans to withdraw the garrison stationed at Work Point Barracks in Esquimalt, but Mr. Cadieux said a definite decision on the future of both Work Point and the naval school at Naden would not be made until a defence review was completed.

He did not say when a review or report would be made.

BLOOD CLINIC SHOOTS PAST 400 TARGET

The two-day blood donor clinic at Red Cross House exceeded its 400 pint objective by seven pints, A. T. Lashmar, blood donor panel supervisor, said today.

Only 160 pints were given Monday, but 247 volunteers turned up Tuesday to boost donations past the target.

More blood donor clinics are scheduled for the first week of December.

On Dec. 2 a clinic will be held at Royal Roads and will move to the Canadian Forces Base at Esquimalt on Dec. 3.

Board Asks Authority For Extended Outfall

FIRM HIRED IN ATTEMPT TO FIND FOIL

Northwest Hydrofoil Lines said today that Jon Lindbergh of Ocean Systems, Inc., has been hired to try to recover the port foil ripped from the hydrofoil Victoria near Port Townsend a week ago.

William Niedermair, Northwest Hydrofoil president, said recovery of the foil, which he valued at upwards of $250,000, would save eight months' time in getting the commuter ship back in service. Niedermair said he doubts the foil is too badly damaged to repair, but even if it is many of its parts can be used.

The Victoria was southbound from Victoria to Seattle when it struck an unidentified underwater object off Point Wilson.

Navy Plane In Trouble

Naval firemen were spreading foam on a Patricia Bay airstrip at noon hour preparing for a crash landing by a Canadian Forces Tracker aircraft.

There were two men aboard. They said the plane originally planned a landing at 9:45 a.m. but the pilot found he could not lower his wheels.

Other aircraft were sent up to attempt to see the snag in the landing apparatus and advise the pilot how to correct it. This proved impossible.

Bid to Force Key Decision

By JIM HUME

The Regional District Board will place the sewer outfalls versus treatment plant issue into the provincial lap this weekend.

Scheduled for publication in the Times legal columns Saturday is a small notice stating the regional board has applied to the Pollution Control Board to extend the Macaulay Point outfall to a length of 4,800 feet.

The regional board is in effect asking the provincial government to make a specific decision on outfalls with treatment plants or outfalls, deep and long, which will discharge raw but comminuted sewage into the sea.

Regional officials said they did not expect a quick reply from the Pollution Control Board.

NEXT YEAR

It is more than likely that it will be 1969 before an answer is received.

The outfall at present is listed at zero feet on a low tide.

Cost of the outfall, if approved by the PCB, would be sbout $1.5 million.

Cost of the outfall if health officials insist on treatment prior to disposal would be slightly less but with $3.4 million added to the over-all cost for a treatment plant.

By building a primary treatment plant, the minimum Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has said he will permit, the length of the deepsea outfall would be reduced by 20 per cent.

The Macaulay Point outfall, located near the western entrance to Victoria harbor, was constructed in 1913.

As it stands now the Macaulay Point outfall discharges raw sewage into three feet of water just below the water mark.

The outfall serves parts of Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt.

PRIORITY

Regarded as a number one priority by consulting engineers the extenssion of the outfall, with or without a treatment plant, would go a long way to solving the pollution problems in the Colquitz Basin.

Sewage from the Colquitz basin would be collected through a trunk system to a pumping station located near Hampton Park. From the pumping station it would flow by gravity to the Selkirk siphon on the existing Northwest Trunk line.

Both siphon and sections of the Northwest Trunk would require reconstruction to handle increased flow.

Before final dispoal sewage would be comminuted (chopped up) and pumped into the sea at a mimimum depth of 50 feet and 4,800 feet from shore.

Students Got the Message Loud, Clear From Michener

By DON VIPOND

Governor-General Michener visited schools in Greater Victoria this morning — and talked the languages students understand.

He declared a school holiday, a full day off sometime in the next two weeks, but said when it would be was a secret.

A half-day holiday had been anticipated. The announcement seemed to catch department of education and school board officials a little off-balance. No spokesmen seemed to know when it would be but most said it would be province-wide.

TEACHERS TOO

Students responded with mighty cheers and clapping wherever he delivered the glad tidings. At Oak Bay Junior the teachers applauded when he said it was for them too.

It was a whirlwind dash which began at Central Junior and included offical stops at Oak Bay Junior, Reynolds Junior-Senior and Esquimalt Junior before a private luncheon at Government House.

But there were colorful moments along the way as the speeding cavalcade, led by four city motorcycle policemen, stopped where children lined the road waving flags, cheering and clapping.

At St. Margaret's School on Fort Street Mr. Michener left his limousine to walk alongside the girls in their red berets, chatting and waving. He crossed the street and returned along the throng lining the other side.

CLOSE LOOK

At Willows school he walked close to a quarter-mile to give the excited youngsters a close-up look at the Queen's representive in Canada.

Among the hundreds of students in front of Dean Heights and Lansdowne Junior was one boy with a placard which read "Up with the Governor-General."

Children in B.C. are among the most favored in Canada in education facilities, he told students at Central Junior.

He urged them to seize opportunities when they are presented because they only come once in a lifetime.

"You must think in terms of the moment," he said, adding if he had his life to live over, he would have done a number of things differently.

The crowd at Oak Bay junior filled the auditorium and jammed bleachers in the nearby gymnasium. The vice-regal couple passed a guard of honor in the gym before taking the only route to the auditorium stage — through the spruced-up boys' dressing rooms.

As Mr. Michener left the school by the front hall he paused for a look at the art display.

"That looks vaguely familiar," he said to principal Peter Boldt of a papier mache figure in a stripped bathing suite with a de Gaulle-like nose.

PROUD MOMENT for Garnett Moen, 14, president of the students' council at Central Junior high school, came this morning when he made presentation to Governor-General Roland Michener, visiting Greater Victoria schools. Micheners leave Victoria for Vancouver Thursday morning in their first official visit to B.C. since Mr. Michener was named the Queen's representative in Canada 18 months ago. (Times Photo)

Drinkers Face Automatic Suspensions

Impaired Drivers Peterson Target

Impaired drivers will soon face an automatic one-month suspension of driving privilege following a first conviction, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson indicated Tuesday.

The attorney-general said he had recommended this policy to the superintendent of motor vehicles and would like to see it come into effect as soon as possible.

"Hopefully before the festive season," he added.

He said the superintendent has the authority to invoke a mandatory suspension and that he is convinced a more severe approach to the problem of drinking drivers is required "even where the courts may decide against taking such action."

In a speech to the Canadian Federation on Alcohol Problems Tuesday evening in Vancouver Mr. Peterson said the drinking driver "is undoubtedly one of the greatest hazards in the country today."

RISK KNOWN

"I think it would be helpful for all drivers in the province to know before they take a drink that by so doing they run the risk of losing their right to drive for a definite period.

"I would like to see a mandatory suspension of the right to drive for at least a month without any exceptions whatsoever," he said.

The attorney-general said his proposal is not aimed at motorists given 24-hour roadside suspensions.

Victoria magistrates usually suspend a person's licence or recommend suspension following a first conviction for impaired driving. The suspensions have often been for three or four months or more. Drivers occasionally are given permission to drive during working hours.

NO LEEWAY

Mr. Peterson said his recommendation was that no driving to work privileges be given as it would detract from the effectiveness of the policy. Even if the magistrate did allow privileges the superintendent could take the driver off the road completely for the first month regardless, he said.

He said the superintendent's authority would superimpose that of the magistrage. Magistrates would not be bound by the policy unless it was a law.

Magistrates in quite a number of areas don't give a licence suspension following a conviction but leave it up to the department.

"I want to persuade the driving public of the basic wisdom and rightness of that well-worn slogan If you drink, don't drive — If you drive, don't drink, said Mr. Peterson.

"Every citizen should understand this is the safe and intelligent decision to make."

The attorney-general said a further announcement would be made soon regarding the initiation of the new policy.

What Happens When the VIPs Disappear Behind Closed Doors?

By JOHN MIKA

When the striped-pants set holds a ceremonial tete-a-tete with all the pomp of red carpets, red coats and red maple leaf bunting, what do they talk about after all the protocol requirements have been met?

Do the prestigious visitors show the normal deference of guests by complimenting the neighborhood and the decor — just like old Harry and his wife when they dropped in on you from the east?

And does the host preen a little under the flattery, offer to drive the guests around to see a bit more of the neighborhood, reveal some of his cherished plans for the future, just like you do?

And does the guest press a snapshop on the host? And does the host smile and say he's grateful for the thoughtfulness ? And does . . .?

Well, there were seven spectators who turned out Tuesday to witness Premier Bennett greet Governor-General Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener on the front steps of the Legislative Building and 10 minutes later there were nine to see the vice-regal party depart after Mr. Michener's first official visit to the provincial headquarters.

If those spectators were curious as to what took place when the dignitaries, police and press disappeared behind the closed doors of Premier Bennett's office, here's a brief rundown of most of the pleasantries and chit-chat which were exchanged:

The premier smiled delightedly as the governor-general repeatedly addressed him as "Mr. Prime Minister"; Repeatedly remarked on the astonishing rate of development in the province; And obliquely admitted that Mr. Bennett has even more "trophies and mementos" accumulated during years of prominent public service.

"We have a new museum now," said Mr. Bennett, his face lighting up as he suggested the Governor-General might like to see it.

With the large vice-regal party settled in his office, with Mr. and Mrs. Michener on either side of him, the premier opened the conversation with: "You see, Your Excellency, we have a very modest office here in keeping with our effort not only to govern well but also to think always of economy."

Mr. Michener, former Conservative Commons speaker and high commissioner to India just prior to his present post, rejoined with:

"Ah, I am impressed with the modesty of the executive centre of the province.

"But it's full of trophies I notice. You must lead a very busy life, Mr. Prime Minister."

The premier quickly added that his house in Kelowna and apartment in Oak Bay also are crammed with souvenirs, trophies and mementoes presented to him at various public occasions because his office wasn't big enough to hold them all.

"I've begun experiencing the same thing as I travel across Canada," replied Mr. Michener.

"I have a billiard room . . . that I'm beginning to fill with their trophies and mementoes.

"It will become quite an exciting place."

The governor-general and the premier added to one another's memento collection when Mr. Bennett was presented with an autographed photo of the vice-regal couple while Mr. Michener received a totem pole and Mrs. Michener a brooch with the province's dogwood seal.

After more pleasantries about previous visits to the province by both Mr. and Mrs. Michener, the two men joshed a little about politics after Mr. Bennett smilingly noted that Mr. Michener had exceptional background in the field.

"Oh, I had some connection with politics in my unregenerate days but I'm not involved in politics anymore," said Mr. Michener.

"I'm above politics now, Mr. Prime Minister," the governor-general smiled.

"Above politics?" questioned an equally-smiling premier. "Or beyond politics?"
